Union Rejects Plea

Resume Service, Asks N.Y. Mayor

NEW YORK (AP) — Union negotiators promptly rejected Mayor John V. Lindsay's plea today for resumption of subway and bus service while labor contract negotiations continue.

Lindsay entered the strike talks on the fifth day of a city-wide transportation paralysis which started the day he took office.

The rejection of his plan came from the second line of union negotiators, now handling the bargaining for the nine officers of two striking unions who were jailed for calling the strike.

Still another court session was scheduled for the afternoon concerning the possibility of levying fines against the officers and the unions.

UNION ADAMANT

Emerging from a session with Lindsay, the mayor's first intervention since being sworn in, a union spokesman said: "No contract no work."

Lindsay's press aide said the mayor intended to stay with the talks until an agreement for service is worked out.

Lindsay had said that if his presence was needed at the talks, the parties would have to come to city hall. Instead, at the call of his three-man mediation panel, he went to the negotiations at the Americana Hotel.

URGE STAGGERED HOURS

Meantime, the morning work rush began to abate. Traffic Commissioner Henry A. Barnes, overseeing the flow, said drivers apparently got an earlier start today.

In an effort to ease the more clogged evening travel rush, the city recommended that businesses in lower Manhattan voluntarily stagger work hours.

"By spreading the peak over a longer period it relieves the pressure," Barnes said. "We'll be able to cope with it."

The bargaining talks were thrown into a turmoil Tuesday by the jailing and collapse of union leader Michael J. Quill. He and eight other officers of two striking unions were arrested on the order of a judge who found them in contempt for ignoring a court order forbidding the strike.

But two hours after entering jail, Quill, a 60-year-old heart patient, collapsed.

QUILL IMPROVED

A Bellevue Hospital spokesman said this morning that Quill "looks improved, his color is back and he's more like himself." The spokesman said specialists still were studying tests to determine whether he had suffered a heart attack.

Adding another dimension to the crisis is the threat that a major commuter lifeline, the Long Island Rail Road, may be halted.

The traffic department estimated at 6 a.m. that the number of cars headed for Manhattan was double the number of Tuesday, which in turn had been twice that of Monday.

Barnes said apparently economic pressures were forcing people to return to work as the strike lengthens.

UN Members Asked for Aid On Viet Peace

U.S. Urges Formula Search

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The United States today invited members of the United Nations to do whatever they believe might contribute to peace in Viet Nam.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg delivered for circulation as a security council document a brief report on the world-wide peace offensive launched by President Johnson during Christmas week when a lull was ordered in U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam.

Goldberg then told a news conference that the peace offensive was not a "propaganda exercise" and that no "ultimatum" to the Communists was intended.

He pointed out in his report to the United Nations that the bombing of North Viet Nam has not been resumed since the Christmas truce.

PAUSE TO END

Asked whether this meant the bombing pause would continue or might end soon, Goldberg said of the statement in his letter:

"This is a present fact."

The letter asked all UN members to give "more urgent thought" to the search for a formula to end the Viet Nam war.

He said the U.S. was ready to enter into unconditional negotiations if the government in Hanoi wanted to do so.

The report, Goldberg said, included a summary of the essential points made by President Johnson's emissaries in visits to many capitals on both sides of the iron curtain.

LONG AND INVOLVED

"Mainly, our conversations with heads of state were long and involved," he said, adding he would not divulge the content of any talks except the note from Pope Paul VI to Johnson whose publication was authorized by the pontiff.

Goldberg said the Soviet Union —not visited by any of the Johnson peace envoys—had been advised of "the essential character of what is going on."

Asked if Washington had received any indication from any source, despite its public ridicule of the peace offensive, that Hanoi might be willing to enter peace negotiations, Goldberg said: "We are going to continue these efforts."

Goldberg said Thant was the first to be advised of the peace offensive.

U.S. 'FLYING CRANE' DOWNED BY VIET CONG

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong today shot down a mammoth U.S. army "flying crane" helicopter while it was ferrying ammunition to the Vietnamese central highlands, killing the five Americans aboard. U.S. troops in the same area captured and burned a Communist base camp.

A U.S. spokesman said the $6.25 million twin turbine aircraft called a "Skycrane" was burning before it crashed and that it apparently was the victim of ground fire. It was one of only six in existence. Ammunition aboard exploded for hours afterward, preventing any rescue efforts.

RELIEF FOR VANCOUVER

It's Rain, Rain For City Area

Victoria got the all-clear today from weatherman William Mackie.

The thermometer's on the way up and snow's on the way out.

Rain today started the clean-up job. And further rain is forecast for the next few days.

Overnight temperatures will be around 35, rising to 42 during the daytime.

While Victoria is on the road to recovery, the rest of Vancouver Island is wallowing in several feet of snow.

(See story Page 21.)

Intense cold that covered the northern province was to moderate also. Temperatures ranged to 27 below zero at Prince George Tuesday night.

RAIN FOLLOWS

In Vancouver, snow this morning was to be followed by rain later today.

Despite the fact that many Vancouverites were taking buses, traffic in some areas was chaotic. It got worse as a light snow started falling.

Cars parked on all transit routes in the city were towed away by police Tuesday night to give snow-clearing crews a chance.

City health officer Dr. G. A. Mott warned elderly persons not to attempt to shovel their walks. He gave his warning after Arthur V. Johnson, 76, collapsed and died while removing snow from his roof.

At Sandspit on the southern end of the Queen Charlotte Islands the hotel had 60 guests in space normally used by 31. Loggers flying in to the Sandspit airport could not get from there to their isolated camps elsewhere on the islands.

VAUGHAN

Ex-President Of CNR Dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Charles Vaughan, who rose from a railway messenger boy to president of the CNR, died suddenly at his home here Wednesday. He was 82.

Mr. Vaughan was president of the railway from 1941 to 1950, when he retired after 51 years of railway service.

Immediately prior to the outbreak of war in 1939, he left his job as a CNR vice-president temporarily to organize and head the country's defence purchasing board until it became the nucleus of the ministry of supply.

He then returned to the railway and his 1941 appointment as president. The following year he was named chairman of the CNR's board.

'Abolish Bank Loan Ceiling'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Governments—federal and provincial—were told today to hold the line in spending and not cut taxes to prevent the 1965 economic boom from becoming a bust in 1966.

The Economic Council of Canada also urged in its second report on the state of the economy that the 6 per cent ceiling on bank loans be abolished.

The report called on government to "minimize distortions and instabilities in credit and markets and to ensure easier access by homebuilders, consumers and small business to credit."

Principal recommendation toward this end was the removal of the "arbitrary" 6 per cent ceiling on bank loan interest rates "which currently forces many small borrowers into loans at much higher rates."

The ceiling was "unfavorable to the little fellow," said chairman John Deutsch. He said he didn't think removal of the bank rate ceiling would result in the increase of other interest rates.

He said suggested higher rates now demanded by consumer loan companies would likely come down.

TROUBLE SPOTS REMAIN

Safeguards Built-In Against Major Inflation

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Improved productivity through more and better education is the golden key to total prosperity for Canada in the years ahead, the Economic Council of Canada says in its second annual review.

The 28-members advisory council, in a 70,000-word review of the economy made public today, says there are built-in safeguards against runaway inflation and serious balance of payments difficulties if the authorities will deal effectively with specific trouble spots.

But it argues against fiscal and monetary policies — taxation, government expenditure, money supply and credit easiness—which would further stimulate demand. Needed now, the report says, are measures to stimulate supply rather than demand.

The big gains must be made in productivity and this can be enhanced by more education and worker re-training programs.

Reviewing the past year, the council says Canada surpassed the council's goal in employment and economic growth. Prices did rise higher than the goal set by the council's first annual review a year ago, but the second review says that except for pressures in the construction field, there are no signs of excessive inflation.

EAST NEEDS HELP

The review also says that for 40 years authorities have been trying to boost the less-developed parts of the country, without much success. The main area needing help is the Atlantic provinces and eastern Quebec.

The council, which makes its recommendations publicly to all authorities and not alone to the federal government or any one cabinet minister, says subsidies "merely to create temporary activity or to sustain indefinitely low-productivity industries and declining occupations" should be avoided.

See Stories On Page 15

It urges that "efficient agglomerations of activity—growth centres" be encouraged in the less-developed areas to take advantage of mass production, larger markets and more useful pools of skills.

On manpower and productivity, the council recommended the creation of a new manpower ministry—something the federal government plans to do with Jean Marchand as the minister-designate.

In an interview, council chairman John J. Deutsch said this was one of the recommendations in the council's first annual review which he developed in discussions with the government and some ministers.

The council recommended that university education be made available to every quali-

INDICTED today by grand jury in Washington on charges of tax evasion, conspiracy and other offences was former U.S. Senate aide Robert G. (Bobby) Baker. The indictment charged that Baker understated his income by $54,558 for 1961 and 1962.

Manhunt Ends In Australia

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (Reuters)—Escaped killer-convicts Ronald Ryan and Peter Walker were recaptured in Sydney tonight, 17 days after they broke jail in Melbourne, following one of the biggest manhunts in Australian history.

Ryan, 41, and Walker, 24, escaped from Melbourne's Pentridge jail, 500 miles from where they were recaptured, on Dec. 19 after clubbing a prison chaplain and shooting dead a guard.

Since their escape, they have been held responsible for robbing a bank of $10,000 and killing a man.

Ship Out of Danger As Fire Controlled

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Lines cargo ship laden with paint and rubber caught fire on a rain-swept Atlantic today, but the U.S. Coast Guard said later the blaze has been controlled and the ship is out of danger.

The American Rover was Europe-bound through heavy seas 160 miles off Newfoundland when the fire broke out. It headed for Argentia, Nfld.

The ship reported the fire has been controlled, but still smouldered, the coast guard said.

A coast guard plane, carrying fire equipment, hovered above the burning ship. The ship did not ask it for help.

The fully-automatic ship carried a crew of 39.

A steady rain fell and winds were up to 58 knots.

Strike at Granduc Closes Down Mine

VANCOUVER (CP)—A strike of hourly rated employees of remote Granduc Mines was called today. The workers were in Vancouver for the Christmas holidays and have been prevented by weather from returning to the mine north of Stewart, 90 miles north of Prince Rupert.

Granduc closed the mine Tuesday in anticipation of the strike.

BUILDERS OF B.C. FEATURE BEGINS TODAY

Capsule biographies of 100 Founders of British Columbia comprise a new series starting today on page 5 of The Times.

The feature will appear weekly during the centennial years 1966 and 1967.

In 1966 British Columbia celebrates the passing of 100 years since the union of the Crown Colonies of Vancouver Island and the British Columbia mainland. In 1967 the province joins in the national celebration of the centennary of Confederation.

The series has been prepared by the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of B.C. Its purpose is to better acquaint British Columbians with the lives and accomplishments of a representative group of the men and women who helped to build our province . . . explorers, fur traders, politicians, churchmen and early industrialists.

The committee points out that no project of this sort could mention all the pioneers who built B.C. This sampling is intended, however, to honor them all.

CRUCIAL TEST IN BYELECTION THIS MONTH

Labor Threatened by Viet Nam Policy Foe

LONDON (AP)—A professed radical opened a byelection campaign Tuesday to topple Britain's Labor government because of its support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam. The political mathematics of the government and the district make him a serious threat.

The byelection in the port city of Hull Jan. 27 is shaping up as the most crucial for Prime Minister Wilson's government since it took office in 1964. It was brought on by the death of the Labor member of Paliament for Hull North, Henry Solomons, last November.

Defeat for Labor would reduce its over-all House of Commons majority to one vote. Its prestige would be so badly damaged that Wilson might have to resign.

The challenge to Wilson is posed by Richard Gott, 27, a journalist running as the candidate of a group calling itself the Radical Alliance. Its organizers are leaders of Britain's ban-the-bomb movement, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

In most special elections, Gott normally could expect several hundred votes, a small amount of publicity and a platform to air his views.

He would represent little more than nuisance value to the other candidates: Labor representative Kevin McNamara, 31, a law lecturer at Hull Commercial College; Conservative Toby Jessel, 31, a London exporter, and Mrs. Laurie Millward, a housewife who is the Liberal candidate.

GOTT

But because of Labor's narrow majority in both the Commons and the Hull North district, Gott is far more than just a nuisance for Labor. In the 1950s, Hull North elected Conservative MPs by margins of less than 1,000 votes. Solomons, the first Labor candidate elected in more than a decade, squeaked in by a margin of 1,181 votes out of a total of 47,717.

All the Conservatives need in Hull is a shift of less than two per cent of the voters away from Labor. They already have done better than that in several byelections during the last year. Gott's votes will come from labor, and they could make all the difference, even if they only number in the hundreds.

"Everyone is interested in the tragedy of Viet Nam," Gott told a reporter. "If I can make Mr. Wilson think again, I will have achieved my purpose."

Looks like they'll hev t' work out New York's transportation problem foot by foot.

15-YEAR MANDATE

Grits Happy With Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson has made it clear he has no plans for an early retirement from politics.

He delivered the message Tuesday both at a press conference and at a closed strategy meeting by Liberal MPs and senators.

Mr. Pearson will turn 69 April 23 and thus qualify for the $75-a-month old age pension.

The party caucus unanimously passed an unusual motion of confidence in his leadership Monday. Caucus chairman Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday Mr. Pearson had been given a 15-year mandate.

Mr. Pearson said he is willing to carry on as party leader as long as he is physically and mentally able. "And at the moment I feel physically and mentally fit."

He was approaching the new Parliament opening Jan. 18 with "great anticipation and eagerness to continue my work as leader of the party and as prime minister."

MAJORITY ELUDES HIM

Mr. Pearson has led his party in four general elections since he was elected leader eight years ago this month. Since then Liberal strength in the Commons has increased to 131 seats from an all-time low of 50 but a clear majority has eluded the former diplomat.

The Liberal MPs and senators met morning, afternoon and night Monday and Tuesday to review the Nov. 8 election and the government's legislative program for this year.

Word leaked out that many backbenchers urged the cabinet to "do something concrete to offset opposition demands for a $100 monthly old age pension. Mr. Pearson opposed this during the campaign, saying it would mean an irresponsible and massive increase in federal spending.

Many Liberals feel the Conservatives' promise of a $100 pension cost the government many votes and prevented the Liberals from gaining a majority in the 265-seat Commons.

The party's dismal showing in the Prairies—one seat out of 48—came in for discussion. Mr. Pearson said western senators made "very constructive suggestions. We hope by our actions, our attitudes and our interest in that area to increase our representation."

The next caucus is set for Tuesday, Jan. 18, immediately before Governor-General Vanier opens the 27th Parliament.

HOME GARDEN

Spring 'Appears' Nearer

By HILDA BEASTALL

Seed catalogs can always be counted on to arrive when we need them most.

They give the spirits a lift, bringing spring nearer with the need for planning and ordering.

Hilda

Some of the new things this year are really exciting especially among the annuals to be grown from seed for bedding patio boxes and outdoor planters.

A new petunia named Sunburst appears to be a lovely butter yellow grandiflora with which to make gorgeous summer color splashes.

Until now petunia colors have had only white to tone down the hot pinks, reds and rich purples. Now with this yellow, perhaps the sombrely mysterious blues and purples will become more appreciated.

A snapdragon with open-faced florets somewhat resembling the Butterfly-flower, schizanthus, is a winner being introduced this year.

The plants are 30 inches in height, branching from the base, and will continue in bloom until October if each stem is cut off as the flowers fade.

Bright Butterflies is the attractive name given this new snapdragon, for the color range includes red, bronze, pink, white, rose, yellow, scarlet and primrose.

A third new annual for this year appears among the cosmos, which is an ideal flower to hide fences or simply to furnish a background.

We have had the four to five-foot pink, red and white cosmos for years. These were followed by pink and red varieties of immense size, and then Orange Flare.

Now we are to see Sunset, a semi-double, two-inch diameter, burnt orange cosmos on bushy plants 30 inches in height.

I can imagine this being stunningly effective to give height to a flat bed of Blue Mantle petunias in full sun; or to fill small island beds set into a sunny patio.

Next week we'll take a peak at some new perennials.

Vote Muddle Cleared

INVERMERE (CP) — The matter of the ill-timed Invermere election appears to be settled. Successful commission candidate, Mrs. Ian Weir and Joseph Fuller, took their oaths of office and allegiance Monday night and it is not now expected that the village election will be further disputed.

Mac-Powell Appeal Bid Adjourned

A special court of revision here adjourned a multi-million-dollar appeal by MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co. Tuesday so that a legal question could be solved at a Supreme Court trial in Vancouver Jan. 17.

The company will attack the validity of a provincial tax department assessment of $34,167,939 set on 39,000 acres purchased in the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway land belt area a year ago.

The assessment would result in a $8,541,984 bonus tax under a special act as well as $2 million in normal land taxes. It also would set the precedent for assessing another 180,000 acres involved in the sale.

The court of revision hearing was re-scheduled to Feb. 27, to follow the court case.

30,000 Protest Chemical Use

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Thirty thousand people have demonstrated in the Can Tho province of South Viet Nam in protest against the use of "toxic chemicals" by United States forces, the North Viet Nam News agency reported today.

The report said people of the province marched repeatedly to two district capitals to demand compensation from the Americans for damage to their property.

The agency said chemical spraying in Chau Thanh and O Mon districts had affected thousands of people and destroyed more than 20,000 acres of crop fields and gardens.

2,700 Mothers Seek $45,000 For Disabled

Seeking $45,000 to help the disabled in the province, 2,700 mothers will march on Greater Victoria homes Jan. 31.

The mothers will knock on doors of homes and businesses between 4 and 7 p.m. Proceeds of the march will be used in a wide program of services.

Provincial honorary chief marching mother this year will again be Mrs. George Pearkes, wife of B.C.'s Lieutenant-Governor. Mrs. Pearkes has headed the marching mothers for four years.

Provincial goal is $275,000. The local group collected about $43,000 in 1964.

Among the services supported by the project:

- Victoria's Arbutus Crafts, 1119 Vancouver Street, where 45 handicapped manufacture baskets and furniture;
- A Vocational Services Centre in Vancouver with a clerical school and a supervised workshop, to which local handicapped are directed for training;
- Speech and hearing services in Vancouver and Victoria, which handle more than 2,500 persons annually;
- Medical rehabilitation and equipment including doctor bills, hospitalization and drugs, for 500 persons each year;
- Construction grants for provincial health centres and many related services.

Mothers wishing to volunteer their time for the end-of-month campaign should contact Rody Ryan at 388-5196.

ACCUSED:

Constable 'Kicked Me First'

A man stopped for questioning on a city street appeared in central court Tuesday charged with assaulting a police officer.

Police said they stopped William Nelson, 1607 Camosun, early this morning on Queens' Ave. to question him in connection with overnight break-ins.

Magistrate William Ostler accepted a not guilty plea from him after the charge of assaulting Constable Russell Redman was read.

"I'm guilty of that," said Nelson after the charge was read, "but he kicked me first."

Nelson then pulled up his shirt and showed the court a bruise on the right side of his chest.

"He kicked me in the crotch," he added.

"He said to the other officer there 'I figure we've got enough on him right now.' He had me around the neck and I couldn't speak," the accused man continued.

"This man is undefended. I am going to take a plea of not guilty," said Magistrate Ostler.

He remanded Nelson to Thursday for trial and set bail at $500.

ON RHODESIA

12 PMs Likely To Be at Meet

LONDON (CP)—Arnold Smith, Canadian head of the Commonwealth secretariat, left by air today for Lagos, Nigeria, with six members of his staff to prepare for next week's Commonwealth meeting on Rhodesia which starts Tuesday.

Several other members of the Commonwealth secretariat, working on its first major meeting since being established last year, are to leave Thursday.

The meeting was called by Prime Minister Sir Abubakar Tafawa Balewa of Nigeria to discuss Rhodesia's seizure of independence and Commonwealth reaction to the seizure.

At least 18 of the 22 Commonwealth countries are expected to be represented at the Lagos meeting. Twelve are likely to have their prime ministers as representatives. Prime Minister Pearson will attend.

There was still no firm indication today whether Prime Minister Wilson will attend for Britain. He has been withholding an announcement of his decision, apparently because of involvement in the Viet Nam peace efforts and uncertainty about the shape of the Lagos meeting itself.

The Sun, an independent left-wing daily, says in its headline story today that the government is confident it can bring down Ian Smith's rebel regime in Rhodesia "before the end of March."

REPORT TIMETABLE

"Whitehall experts have worked out a detailed timetable for Smith's downfall," the story says, listing economic chaos as being likely in Rhodesia by next month and a standstill in industry and transport by March as a result of the oil embargo.

Diplomatic reporter Michael Leapman writes that he understands Wilson is prepared to put forward the end of March as a target date for Smith's downfall at the Lagos meeting.

The Sun says President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia is expected to cut off all imports from Rhodesia — which sends one-third of all its exports to neighboring Zambia.

The story was described as "entirely speculative" by a spokesman at Wilson's office. It was inappropriate to speak in terms of time-tables, the spokesman said, and he doubted that Wilson would do so. While contingency plans had obviously been made by the government, they could not be sent out in a cut-and-dried manner without knowing what effect world sanctions on Rhodesia were having day by day.

ZAMBIA SEES RHODESIA COLLAPSE

NAIROBI (Reuters) — Zambia's Home Affairs Minister Mathias Mainza Chona said here today his government has reliable information that the white-minority Rhodesian government of Ian Smith, which seized independence from Britain, would soon collapse.

Chona refused to elaborate on his statement, made in an interview with the Kenya News Agency.

Big Drought New Threat In Rhodesia

SALISBURY (Reuters)—Widespread drought poses a severe new threat to the hard-hit Rhodesian economy, farm officials said today.

Rhodesia already is under international trade sanctions and an oil embargo following the white-ruled colony's break with Britain Nov. 11.

Unless nearly 200,000 head of cattle can be transported to better grazing areas soon, many thousands are likely to die of thirst. A government spokesman said the loss could run into millions of pounds.

Serious crop failures have been reported in Matabeleland and the Midlands. Even if rain comes soon, there is little prospect of saving much of the crops.

Railway officials Tuesday night offered to start a massive evacuation program to move drought-stricken cattle to better grazing, making 300 cattle cars available immediately.

The dry spell follows two successive years of drought and two poor seasons before that.

RED OFFICER:

'People Blame Hanoi'

VIENTIANE, Laos (AP) — Two North Vietnamese army officers captured in Laos claimed today many North Vietnamese blame the Hanoi government for U.S. bombing of their country.

Cadet Officer Pham Dinh Than, 30, said in an interview the North Vietnamese believe the U.S. is bombing their country because their government is sending men and supplies to the "big war" in South Viet Nam. He said his people are not interested in fighting in the south.

Pham's commanding officer, Le Huy Linh, 37, also said "many" North Vietnamese blamed their government for the bombing. Both he and Pham said American bombs had fallen on many non-military targets and killed many civilians.

Le said 102 bombs fell last September on his village, in the southern province of Vinh, and killed 22 civilians.

Pham, also from Vinh province, said U.S. planes bombed the leper hospital in the Quynh Luu district of Vinh, killed 80 persons and wounded 100.

Both men said the bombing has caused severe food shortages in North Viet Nam. They said food cannot be transported from one area to another because all major bridges and railways have been smashed.

The two men were captured by Laotian forces Dec. 22.

Le said his battalion was sent into Laos because it was thought the United States was preparing to send troops to block the Ho Chi Minh trail in Laos along which North Vietnamese supplies and troops move into South Viet Nam.

Pipeline Open . . . But No Oil

LISBON, Portugal (UPI)—The vital pipeline linking the Mozambique port of Beira with Rhodesia's oil refinery at Umtali, is not to be closed down, it was officially announced in Lisbon and London today.

No oil has been pumped into the 180-mile-long pipeline since Dec. 31 as there has been no intake of crude oil into the storage tanks at Beira since that date.

The British directors of the company which owns the pipeline, Companhia do Pipeline Mozambique-Rhodesia, were defeated by their Portuguese colleagues in a move to close down the pipeline.

The British directors are outnumbered five-four on the company board.

However, the board unanimously refused a Rhodesian request to pump the present contents of the pipeline, estimated at 14,000 tons, into storage tanks at the Rhodesian refinery.

The oil lying in the pipeline would have to be forced through with sea water because there are at present no stocks of crude oil in the Rhodesian storage tanks at Beira.

This would be a hazardous operation which could cause permanent corrosive damage to the pipeline.

The British directors of the company wanted to close down the pipeline in line with Britain's oil embargo against Rhodesia.

Today's communique said their proposal was outvoted after "considerable discusson."

The pipeline has been closed down since Dec. 31 because the British embargo has prevented supplies of crude oil for Rhodesia reaching Beira.

'Meaningful' Peace Dim Despite Big U.S. Push

By JAMES MARLOW

WASHINGTON (AP)—Even if President Johnson succeeds in efforts to get Vietnamese peace talks started—and there is no sign he will—prospects for any meaningful settlement are dim.

His efforts, if unsuccessful, at least will do much to mute criticism here and abroad about his administration's willingness to seek a peaceful settlement.

But it is hard to see how there can be any final agreement between the United States and the North Vietnamese without one side or the other backing down and admitting defeat, even without saying so.

Last April Johnson said he is willing to have "unconditional discussions" but he also said he intends to keep the U.S. "promise" to the South Vietnamese to preserve their independence.

The "appetite of aggression is never satisfied," he said, and "we will not withdraw either openly or under the cloak of meaningless agreement."

He added that "peace demands an independent Viet Nam."

But the Communist answer to that was: "The United States must withdraw its forces from South Viet Nam and let the people of both Viet Nams settle their internal affairs themselves."

If there should be agreement by the Communists now to discuss peace—or just to discuss ways to discuss peace — there might be a halt of some kind in the shooting for the time being.

But how can either side agree to a final settlement without retreating from the conditions it has said are necessary for peace?

If peace demands an independent South Viet Nam, as Johnson said, only a dreamer can imagine South Viet Nam remaining independent very long once American troops were withdrawn.

The Communists would not have to invade from the North. Their arm, the Viet Cong, would still be in South Viet Nam, either under cover or in the open, ready to grab the South Viet Nam government when they could.

And if the North Vietnamese agreed now that there could be a settlement without American withdrawal, they'd also be backing down.

The two sides have put themselves into such a box with their opposite statements and conditions that any real agreement is bound to look distant if not impossible any time soon.

The Role of Peace-Maker

IN SEEKING TO ACT AS MEDIator in the India-Pakistan dispute, Soviet Premier Kosygin obviously has more than one objective—and gaining an unlikely peace between the two warring countries may not be his main one.

It would be a great feather in the Russian leader's cap, of course, if he were able to get Prime Minister Shastri and President Ayub Khan to agree to some form of settlement of the long-standing quarrel over Kashmir. But observers do not see much chance of this: the basic disagreement over ownership of the Kashmir territory has become firmly established on apparently irreconcilable demands. And while both countries offer peace, neither will concede its fundamental principle: India that Kashmir legally belongs to India, and Pakistan that a vote by the people of Kashmir—predominantly Moslem—is essential to any settlement of the controversy.

Russia's chances of success in this endeavor, therefore, are relatively slim. But the widely acknowledged difficulty of the task Mr. Kosygin has set himself ensures that he will suffer little loss of prestige if he should fail. He cannot be faulted for not achieving what no one else has been able to achieve.

The benefits to the disputants, if any, may lie in the formal statement of policies under the restraint which their desire to placate their powerful Soviet neighbor should impose. It is possible that some slight gain may be made, to be improved upon at future meetings.

The benefits to Russia should be much greater. Regardless of the outcome of the talks, Moscow has asserted itself as an important factor in Asian politics—a power to which such large countries as India and Pakistan may turn for impartial encouragement. This affirmed status cannot be other than to Red China's disadvantage and hence the Tashkent development constitutes a boost for Russia in its continuing quarrel with Peking.

Again, the contact of the two disputing countries with Russia should improve the latter's standing with them—if the mediator can avoid the appearance of favoring one over the other—and hence could open the way to closer ties in trade, military dealings and other exchanges. This would not only better the Soviet position against China, it would improve the Soviet position in southern Asia as regards Britain, the United States and other Western allies of India and Pakistan.

In making the Kashmir dispute a matter of personal diplomacy, Mr. Kosygin has at the same time publicly established a Soviet interest in its peaceful solution. This may be taken by Peking as fair warning that the Kashmir issue must not be used by Red China to foment trouble in the sub-continent. India's quarrel with Pakistan, the Soviet position implies, must not be interpreted as an opportunity for Red China to penetrate Indian territory in the north.

These are objectives with which the West cannot quarrel. Russia is therefore emphasizing its position as a nation seeking to preserve peace and to this extent co-operating with the West. Red China appears to have been isolated still further from both ideological East and West—and at a time when Peking's stature, both domestic and foreign, could stand considerable improvement.

A Pressing School Vote

AN EARLY AND AFFIRMAtive reply should be given by the Department of Education to the school board's pending application for speedy re-submission of its supplementary building referendum to the people of Greater Victoria.

The vote, seeking additional funds to cover the higher costs of construction for the program under way, failed by the narrowest of margins last month.

The board took the proper procedure in seeking re-submission. The presumption is that the department will co-operate, having previously approved the referendum. There appears no reason to expect obstacles to be raised against removal of the legal technicality which would delay another vote.

The school board has recognized the fact that insufficient effort was made at the December poll to get out a sufficient vote to endorse the supplementary spending and the board can be counted on to rectify that situation.

The urgency of placing the question once more before the people should be obvious. The extra money is needed to make up the difference between earlier estimates and costs that have risen since those estimates were made. If it is not provided, then some of the school children will be short-changed.

Moreover, there is no indication at this time that costs can be held at present levels—already well above those at the time when the earlier bylaw was passed. If they keep rising and the vote is delayed, the supplement sought from the taxpayers could also go up.

It is conceivable, of course, that necessary future negotiations between municipal and provincial governments may revise formulas to permit transfer of a higher share of school costs from real estate to a broader tax base. Such negotiations, at the moment, are only a hope of the municipalities.

In the meantime the necessary expansion of school facilities is hampered. The educational opportunities of the district's children are rendered uneven. This is a condition the school board will no doubt emphasize when the referendum is again submitted — and the sooner the better.

The Lysenko Lesson

THE MARCH OF SCIENCE AND politics has pushed further aside the one-time czar of Russia's studies in biology. Trofim Lysenko has been formally denounced by the Soviet Academy of Sciences which investigated his work and proved his shortcomings.

The man who rose to absolute power in his field under Josef Stalin, slipped temporarily from eminence after the dictator's death and then regained his position under Khrushchev, had been a declining figure since the latter was thrust from power. The most recent rebuff, however, seems to be the most severe.

Lysenko had astonished many biologists by arguing that changes in heredity could be brought about by changes in environment. He had earned silent condemnation from other Russian scientists for his treatment of outstanding men who disagreed with him. Many were dismissed from their posts. Some died in concentration camps.

In the recent judgment, Lysenko was accused of falsifying statistics on the experimental farm which was his particular concern. Investigation proved that production on this special unit has declined considerably during the last 10 years.

Now a jury of scientists has rendered its verdict and the once-favored protege of Soviet rulers has been forced deeper into disgrace. The procedure, no doubt, is calculated to help bleach out a stain on the record of Russian science.

It is a matter of some interest that while Lysenko was receiving his desserts from Moscow, a young chemist at the University of British Columbia was being accorded further honors on this continent for his important research on the once supposedly inert gas xenon. Dr. Neil Bartlett described to a Victoria audience last year how he had undertaken his research and achieved his success. He closed his address with a heartening comment for both scientists and laymen. What general virtue lay in his accomplishment? he asked. With ingenuous frankness he offered a reply: It helped to prove the virues of a healthy skepticism toward what many people accept as immutable fact.

Mr. Lysenko could have profited from that principle, rather than adjusting facts to fit erroneous theory.

Interest Revisions for Bank Act?

IF the government has in mind major revisions of the Bank Act going beyond those attempted last summer by Mr. Walter Gordon, the expectation is that it will seek to remove, or at least to raise, the 6 per cent statutory interest ceiling on loans and advances payable in Canada. There is no certainty that this will happen but the case for action has obviously been strengthened by the upward pressure of interest rates.

Western

It seems in any case much more likely than an attempt to bring the "near-banks" under federal banking legislation as proposed by the Porter commission. Mr. Pearson's comments on that matter at his press conference last week, while not particularly enlightening, did nothing to encourage hopes that the government has any intention of moving on this front in the immediate future.

Odd Mixture

Mr. Gordon's ill-fated bill was an odd mixture of timidity and courage. It made a polite bow to the Porter commission by accepting a good many of its minor proposals and a few substantial ones. But the minister, in his curious speech of May 18, appeared to be not so much leaning on the commission (despite its exhaustive three years of study) as defending himself against its central recommendations. On the other hand, his legislation was a very firm response to Mr. Bennett's threat of provincial encroachment, which had not materialized while the commission was about its work and was not, accordingly dealt with directly in its massive report.

There is, nevertheless, a passage in the report suggesting that the commission was not without political prescience. The case for government participation in bank ownership rests on the assumption that, in the absence of such an interest, financial institutions may be indifferent to the legitimate needs of a particular region. But the report observes (page 359) that "the broad statistical and other evidence supplied to us does not support the view that the national institutions follow investment policies which discriminate between different provinces or regions of the country, and many of them make conscious efforts to balance their investments regionally, not least because business considerations dictate that they do so." This finding clearly strikes at the basic premise of the Bennett-Lesage case.

Ducked Issue

Although Mr. Gordon was resolute in defence of federal power over banking in this respect, he ducked the issue of the "near-banks" raised in the Porter report. The commission found, and recommended, that banking legislation "should encompass all financial institutions issuing demand liabilities, transferable and short-term deposits, and other short-term banking claims."

Mr. Gordon evidently felt that he had trouble enough with the premier of British Columbia without risking a general engagement with the provinces on the issue of provincially chartered trust, mortgage loan and other semi-banking companies. He developed qualms (not shared by the chief justice of Ontario) over the constitutional position and announced with evident relief that there was no necessity for the extention of federal authority proposed by the commission.

In taking this position, the former minister was obviously placing impressive reliance upon the control and inspection systems of the 10 provinces. That this sunny optimism was not shared by the commission is evident from its comments on page 380. "The essential feature of banking regulation must be good and thorough supervision and inspection such as that which now takes place within the framework of the Bank Act and contributes so much to the soundness of our chartered and savings banks.

Uneven Supervision

"We have found considerable variety in the quality of supervision of other institutions across the country, and think it essential to act before there is a repetition of the unfortunate experiences of many chartered banks prior to the establishment of good supervision in the 1920s." The action the commissioners had in mind was federal action.

Since then we have had the failure of Atlantic Acceptance and the troubles of British Mortgage. The resultant loss to investors was a black eye to Canada abroad; indeed, in the absence of emergency (and somewhat dubious) action by the Ontario government, the consequences might have been disastrous. The case for the assertion of federal jurisdiction has been accordingly strengthened; so unfortunately have the political difficulties which were probably foreseeable even in May, 1965.

On the question of the 6 per cent ceiling, Mr. Gordon was not merely unpersuasive last year; he actually compounded the difficulties facing his successor today.

In fact the ceiling does not provide, even formally, a general protection to borrowers. For the past seven years the banks have been busily developing their personal instalment lending. They are permitted to add service charges, with the result that effective rates two years ago ranged, according to the commission, from 9¼ per cent to 11¼ per cent.

Again the banks have long been permitted to make NHA mortgage loans, although the rate fixed by the government may be above six per cent.

This is not, however, the main point. The general situation is that, when rates are low, the ceiling is of no protection because the banks cannot get six per cent; when it is high, the protection is also illusory because the banks ration their loans and turn to more profitable investments. "The imposition of unduly low ceilings", report the commissioners, (page 366) "only results in the discouragement of credit flows and drives . . . borrowers to unregulated and often extremely high cost lenders."

True Governor

The true governor of interest rates is, or should be competition, especially as the government was prepared last year to prohibit by legislation restrictive agreements among the chartered banks. What the ceiling does is to introduce rigidities into the system; inhibiting the banks, for example, from moving into term loans and in many other ways restricting competition among lenders.

It is not surprising that the banks should direct their fire against those parts of the 1965 legislation which impair their ability to match unregulated competitors.

A Hand for the Blind

This appeal for volunteer drivers is addressed to retired men, or men who are free on Wednesday afternoons who would be willing to drive blind persons to the meetings of the White Cane Club. The meetings are held each Wednesday except in the months of July and August. This year we resume our activities on January 19.

The duties entail calling for a blind person and guide at their home, driving them to the Blind Centre, 1609 Blanshard St., and returning them to their homes shortly after 3:30.

Volunteer drivers will not be asked, neither will they be expected to contribute anything save their services; and while the meetings are in progress they may enjoy the fellowship, along with afternoon tea, of other volunteer drivers.

Royal Treatment

I would like to write a letter of appreciation for the kindness and help all members of the B.C. Ferry System contributed to a merry Christmas.

My father departed Swartz Bay Dec. 22, 1965, at 9 a.m. My brother Harry was permitted to drive his car to the ferry slip to unload my father and my sister. From there the efficient crew assisted my father and sister to very comfortable accommodations aboard.

After a very merry Christmas I drove my father and sister to Tsawwassen on Dec. 22, 1965. King, queen, president or potentate could not have received more service than we did upon our arrival.

All this service was performed most beautifully with what seemed to be a minimum of effort.

My father is Capt. Charles I. Harris, retired, 1770 Lansdowne Road, Victoria, B.C. He is 98 years young.

Our sincere thanks to all the employees who made this trip so pleasant for him.—A. E. Harris, 6831 N.E. 170th, Bothell, Wash.

Canada in Africa

Canada (federally) seems to intend to play an active part in events in Africa.

E. Huxley (a very distinguished name in thought and history) has made these two points:

"It is not correct to visualize (Africa) as a swarming hive of prolific Bantu. Immense stretches were totally unoccupied."

Sir Charles Eliot has written, "in large areas the absence of native population is a feature."

A third point, made by Huxley, is that "regions most favored by Europeans may be those least suited to Africans." "Natives, on the whole, thrive best in hotter . . . places. A population map of Africa shows that the most densely occupied parts are, on the whole, damp, low lying, and to the European unhealthy."

Should not Canada's policy be determined by facts, not fancies?—Facts, Not Fancies.

The Luggage Went Thataway

Highlights of our trip up-Island over the holiday: My husband and I left Victoria Wednesday, Dec. 22, on Bus 606. The bus depot was a mad house, express was piled on our bus in every nook and cranny. I am sure the driver's nerves were frazzled before we even got started but he was still polite to all

When we arrived at Nanaimo everything came out of the bus. Among all this pile we saw our luggage so we assumed we were changing buses. After returning from lunch we found that we were to continue on on the same bus, so to be helpful (not feeling that it was our job) we put our luggage back on. The same thing occurred at Campbell River. We ended our journey on the same bus we started on but our luggage had been on and off that bus twice.

When we returned the next day we put our luggage back on at Nanaimo. But some little Gremlin was at work. When we got into Victoria our luggage was missing.

We were invited to an important function the next night—I in the wrinkled worn suit I travevlled in. Oh well, I will get some clothes in the next sale of lost luggage. — The Hungry Lady in the Wrinkled Suit.

WASHINGTON

LBJ—Can-Do 'Dissembler'

By JOSEPH ALSOP

THE man of the year just ended is obviously President Lyndon Johnson, as he is likely to be the man of each year while he remains in the White House. In all sorts of ways, he has turned in a remarkable, an almost unprecedented performance. At the moment he is playing one of his favorite roles—the role of artful dodger—on the world stage and in the biggest possible way. The conjuring trick that he is attempting to work in Viet Nam may end with the conjurer, not to mention the U.S.A., in a really bad mess. But then again, like so many other Johnson conjuring tricks, it may end with a net gain for the president and the country.

Alsop

With this proviso for unfinished business, it must first of all be said that the president's performance during this last year has quite wonderfully recalled a remark by Mrs. Johnson, when he lost the presidential nomination in 1960. She said she was sorry for many reasons, but perhaps mainly because he would have been such a "Can-Do President."

The President has more than fulfilled Mrs. Johnson's pithy characterization, so bravely offered, under such hard circumstances, so long ago. He has been a super "Can-Do" President since he took office and especially in the last 12 months. At any rate until his peace offensive, he has been "Can-Do" abroad, and especially in Viet Nam; and he has been "Can-Do" on countless important and valuable fronts at home.

This raises an interesting question that has never before had to be asked in American history: whether it is possible to be a truly great president just by being a "Can-Do" president, without the additional ingredient of a certain moral style. For all our truly great presidents have had both qualities, until Lyndon Johnson came along.

Morality Issue

The question cannot be sensibly examined unless careful note is taken of that word, "moral." Almost all discussions of the Johnson style to date have been inexpressibly vulgar—there is no other possible adjective. They have, in other words, been based on the assumption that there must be something wrong, because the President comes from a small country community, and in private when relaxed, has a splendidly racy, rich and earthy way of expressing himself.

The same idiotically meretricious ideas were current about President Lincoln. Secretary of State Seward was in fact silly enough to assume that Abraham Lincoln, being a country bumpkin, was quite incapable of leading the country, which brought Seward to the delightful but erroneous conclusion that the leader would have to be Seward.

If this were the only Johnsonian style problem, it would be enough to say that his style would be vastly improved if he more often showed in public the natural raciness which he displays in private. As it is, he too frequently resembles one of the great empire builders of the Western plains rather painstakinkly but not quite convincingly doing a personal charade of a Baptist preacher.

Moral style, however, is something quite different from personal style. And the fact has to be faced that President Johnson has an uninspiring, perhaps even a downright bad moral style. This does not mean that he is a bad man, or an ungenerous man, or an unpatriotic man. It has nothing to do with his goodness, generosity and patriotism, which are considerable. Nor does it have anything to do with his fairly unique ego which is more than considerable.

He has an uninspiring moral style, in fact, simply because he is not forthright, either with the country or with his associates or, even, one suspects, with his nearest and dearest. With the intellect of a chess player, he sees seven moves ahead in every game. With the skill of a great actor, he dissembles his purposes and makes his moves in secret or after elaborate camouflage.

Purpose Concealed

At the present time, for instance, no one can really judge the true purpose of the peace offensive the president has been waging. Was his aim to prove once again that he had left no stone unturned for peace, and thus prepare for another increase in the U.S. effort in Viet Nam and a diffficult wartime budget? Or was his aim to start the kind of negotiation that must almost certainly lead to a very thinly concealed retreat and surrender? Has the budget problem which had made him so fretful, finally driven him to choose this latter alternative?

No one can tell; that is part of the trouble. Ether way, moreover, it is really a piece of unattractve prestidigitation. It may get the desired results, as similar pieces of Johnsonian prestidigitation have got the desired results (and often extremely beneficial results, too) on several occasions in the recent past.

But if you get results by a now-you-see-it, now-you-don't system, you cannot inspire the country, you cannot point goals that are clear and high, you cannot call forth the best in America. It seems very odd indeed that this should have turned out to be the main fault of this larger-than-life-sized man.

Maybe it will not matter much in the long run; for results, after all, are what mainly matter. And there can be little doubt about Johnson's "Can-Do" qualities.

A Good Yarn

Recently "Science" reported some work on spiders, and it was found that webs spun on Mondays were different from those made on other days of the week. Did the spiders know it was Monday? No. But they did eat their webs every Sunday night when the scientific staff wasn't there to destroy them. And apparently, eating a web makes a spider construct a different one the next day.

More Soviet Reforms

By NICHOLAS DANILOFF
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The year 1966 will see a new triumph of pragmatism in the economies of Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union.

In the last few years, the Soviet bloc has been resisting ex-premier Nikita Khrushchev's call for tight integration on economic and political grounds. The bloc countries were not satisfied with Soviet trade alone and sought Western commerce, and in 1965 daring schemes for spurring economic growth through joint East-West industrial ownership were suggested in Rumania and Yugoslavia.

To this have been added fundamental reforms undertaken by Moscow last year and the victory of the modern socialist economists led by Kharkov University Professor Yevsei Liberman.

The movement for reform was already under way before Khrushchev's downfall in October, 1964. The new Soviet leadership of Premier Alexei Kosygin and Party Leader Leonid Brezhnev immediately rejected much of their predecessor's bold improvising and demanded a strictly scientific approach.

The March, 1965 meeting of the Communist Party central committee approved Brezhnev's wide-ranging agricultural reform.

This involved investing $78.1 billion in the next five years; increasing private plots and holdings of collective farmers, raising the state prices paid for farm goods and lowering compulsory deliveries from state and collective farms.

Profit Tested

This was a stunning program. But to western eyes it seemed somewhat less spectacular than the transformation of the industrial sector. The change, hailed by many specialists as the most significant for the last 40 years, followed the line of Liberman's emphasis on "profit" which had been successfully tested in 1964 in certain factories at Kiev, Lvov and Moscow.

Liberman has focused on profits in order to make each factory a useful undertaking. Also, to give new incentives to factory managers and workers, he has called for profits to be the measure of efficiency and the yardstick for bonuses. Under his scheme, profits will accrue to the state—not private capitalists—for redistribution as new investments and incentives rewards.

Neither Liberman nor the Soviet leaders rejected a general form of socialist planning, but they have criticized attempts to plan a factory's operation down to the most minute detail. This practice, which flourished under Khrushchev, led to a variety of ills. Too much emphasis was laid on fulfilling the numerical demands of the plan; hasty and shoddy workmanship appeared everywhere, and serious miscalculations occurred which, for example, left Moscow one winter without razor blades or socks.

Liberman held that factory managers should be free from tight control. They should exercise initiative and should be asked to make decisions about procuring raw materials, decreasing production costs, introducing new technical devices and determining labor requirements. He said that factories should produce directly for their own markets and should concentrate on selling —and bringing in the profit.

Scheme Spread

Last September's central committee acted to spread the successful experience of experimental factories operating on the Liberman scheme. Khrushchev's regional economic councils were abolished and a small number of new ministries were established in their place. Further, the meeting established a state planning agency to establish new prices for 1966, and thus exercise general control over market operations.

This March, Kosygin will go before the 23rd party congress to unveil the nation's general economic goals during the next five years in the form of the 1966-67 plan.

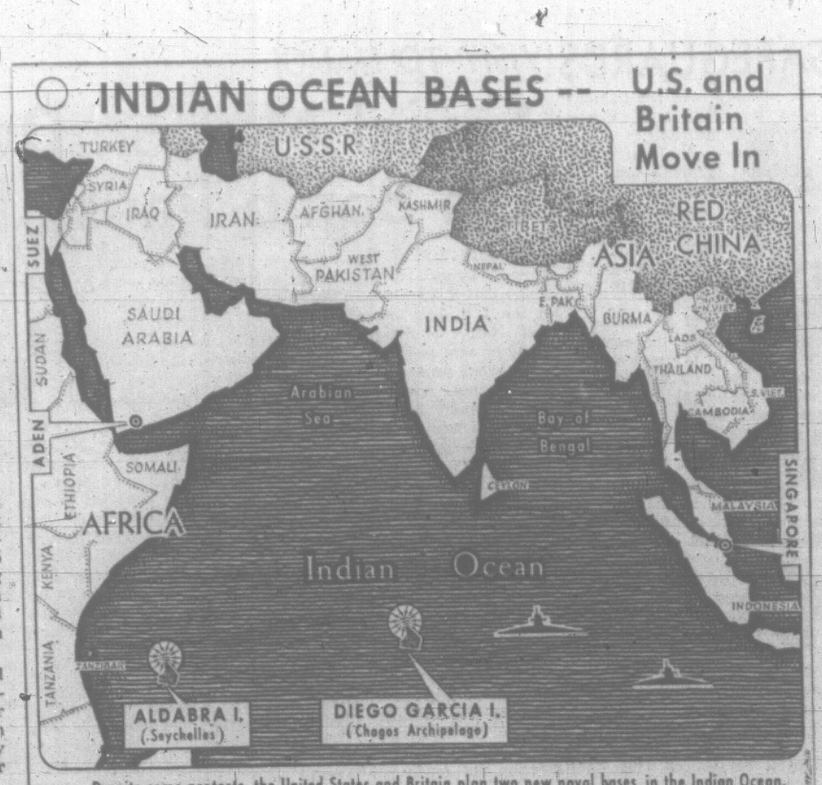
There have been hints of the goals:

Brezhnev's speech in March disclosed, a giant investment in agriculture.

The Soviet parliament paid lip-service to the consumer, but still put much stress on heavy industry and specifically included a five per cent increase in defence spending in a total budget of $115,83 billion.

Interestingly, the industrial growth figure was scheduled at 6.7 per cent, the lowest in recent years.

Against this background, Russia and all the countries of East Europe are pushing their negotiations for more outside trade in 1966. And it it clear that the Soviet Union, which is currently courting Japanese industry and benefiting from West German and British know-how, would like to do business with the United States.



Despite some protests, the United States and Britain plan two new naval bases in the Indian Ocean, guarding against the day Britain may lose Aden and Singapore. The new bases will provide vital communications and refueling centers for the fleet.

India's Double Standard Seen on U.K., U.S. Bases

By CONRAD FINK

NEW DELHI — Criticism has erupted in India over plans by the United States and Britain to establish military bases in the Indian Ocean.

One side result has been a thorough public display of a double standard many Indians use these days in judging Western military might, where it should be stationed and how it should be used. New Delhi counts on Western assistance to India under certain circumstances, but cannot bear the thought of having it stationed nearby.

Two bases are planned, one on Diego Garcia Island in the Chagos Archipelago, near the centre of the Indian Ocean, and the second on Aldabra, in the Seychelles Islands, southwest of Zanzibar on the African coast. They will be mainly communications and refuelling centres for the fleets, with airfields and possibly submarine repair facilities. They will be of particular value if Britain loses its present bases in Aden and Singapore, as now appears possible.

★ ★ ★

Western strategy assigns the Indian Ocean primarily to the British navy, but the bases will be useful to the U.S. Seventh Fleet in its operations in Asian waters. This will include communications with Polaris submarines operating off the coasts.

India's own defence strategy is based, in part, on an understanding that American help would be necessary if China ever launched a major invasion of Indian soil.

The late Prime Minister Jawaharlal Nehru, despite his lifelong advocacy of nonalignment, called for American assurance during the 1962 India-China border war. Elements of the U.S. Seventh Fleet sped to Indian waters.

Today, Nehru's successor, Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri, makes sure U.S. Ambassador Chester Bowles is informed when the Chinese get particularly menacing on India's northern frontier.

India's decision not to manufacture nuclear weapons, even though China has exploded two, is based partially on expectations that America's nuclear forces will keep the Chinese in line.

★ ★ ★

Yet, India is stoutly resisting the Anglo-American effort to bring into the area the wherewithal to provide these guarantees.

Shastri's government has expressed concern over the contemplated bases, charging they merely would introduce cold war tensions into the Indian Ocean.

"The setting up of military installations by one bloc is sort of an invitation for the other group (the Soviet bloc) to step in," is the way a spokesman put it.

Several factors appear behind the Indian government's decision to oppose the bases, even though they would seem to assure India of additional security. They are:

- A desire to back Moscow, which is counted as India's friend these days and which has described the bases as "colonialist" in design.
- An effort to keep step with other Asian and African nations, some of which have condemned the bases as imperialistic and a threat to peace.
- A suspicion that the United States and Britain cannot possibly base any effective anti-China deterrent in the Indian Ocean and that the facilities there would have another devious mission.

There also is a feeling, especially outside official circles, that nearly 29 million square miles of the Indian Ocean should be India's waters.

Moscow Boosting Image Of Dreaded Secret Police

MOSCOW — The year 1965 was a vintage one for spies, or rather for spy publicity. Lonsdale, Sorge, Penkovsky, Abel all wrote or were written about and these works caused varying degrees of irritation on the "other side."

Broke Silence

What made 1965 unique was that the Soviets broke a silence of decades and officially acknowledged their spies; what is more they glorified their exploits and made overt use of them in the international war of words. Spy literature, always a staple in the West, is now available to the Soviet public. Recently the Soviet literary gazette published a long and well-argued critique which compared Ian Fleming with John Le Carre, coming out strongly in favor of Le Carre as a first-rate literary craftsman.

Interesting though this move is, the Soviet people themselves are much more directly affected by a parallel campaign now in full swing inside the Soviet Union to popularize the counter-intelligence and security force.

Spine-Chilling

Known in its 48 years of existence by a series of abbreviations — Cheka, OGPU, NKVD, MVD, MGB and now KGB — the very mention of force has been enough to chill the spine of the most loyal Soviet citizen. Created for the legitimate defence of the fledgling Bolshevik regime against subversion, it became under Stalin and Beria the instrument of arbitrary and merciless terror. The official rehabilitation of many of its innocent victims is an implicit admission of this fact.

Now the Soviet authorities seem to have realized that they must take the next logical step. In an effort to wipe out the stigma of rule by terror with its corollary of profound mistrust between government and people, they have decided to go beyond Krushchev's downgrading of the secret police force from being a 'ministry' to a 'committee' of state security, regarded as a mere change of name on paper, and to launch a massive P.R.-type campaign to brighten up the image of the grim men in trenchcoats and green velours.

But it is obviously well within the competence of the world's old-established P.R. firm — the Agitprop Department of the Soviet Communist Party. All media are being utilized, but the main ones seem to be the cinema, the press (including the heavyweight monthlies) and books.

After a previous showing in Moscow, a week's festival of films about "Heroes of the Secret Police" has just finished its run in Leningrad, whence it will go on to other cities of the USSR.

Front Line

The "festival" is made up of seven old feature films abut Soviet spy-catchers, three documentaries and two new feature films specially released for the festival, called Game Without Rules and What Are You Called Now? The latter's title refers to the moment at the end of the film when in the Red Square, after the war, the Soviet agent meets again the German General Gottburg from whose clutches he escaped after their wartime encounter; Gottburg has changed his name and is by implication now a West German agent. Both this film and Game Without Rules emphasize that the "vigilant Chekist' is still a front-line fighter in the Cold War.

Big Build-Up

The Moscow and Leningrad Secret Police film festivals were given a big publicity build-up and the Leningrad Cinema Weekly was almost entirely taken up by articles about it — the main piece being signed by two men, Brilliantov and Sedov, who gave their full occupation and and titles as members of the KBG. The big draw was a front-page announcement that audiences at the "Festival" meet and talk to members of the security forces in the foyer! This Gilbertian situation can have failed to be appreciated only by the many whose relatives perished at the hands of this organization.

On a different level the campaign appears in the November issue of Znamya, the organ of the Union of Soviet Writers and a journal of considerable intellectual standing.

Great Detail

Here it takes the form of a long article by a Jewish writer, Lev Ginzburg, which describes in great detail the case history of a Soviet Security police investigation into the activities of a German SS Sonderkommando, one of the infamous roving death-squads which performed the mass executions of civilians and the gassing of Jews in occupied Russia. This is a most impressive piece of writing, refreshing in its lack of jargon and bearing the stamp of veracity. To write it, the author states, he was given the full co-operation of the security police.

Ginzburg traces the career of Christmann, the German commanding officer of the Sonderkommando and implies (not very convincingly) that he is still at large in West Germany.

Convincing

What is most remarkable is that for the first time it spells out what most people knew but which has until now been studiedly ignored in print, namely, that much of the most revolting hatchet work of these SS death-squads was carried out by renegade Russians. The work is all the more convincing because it studies the actions and psychological make-up of these peculiarly nauseous traitors with a detachment and even a kind of compassion worthy of the very highest standards of journalism.

It is hard to say how many of its sophisticated readers it will convert to an affection for the security police, but it has done an even greater service it has publicly spoken the truth on a murky subject.

BAMBOO CURTAIN OPENS WIDER AT HONG KONG

By JOHN KIRKWOOD
Times Far East Correspondent

HONG KONG—The Bamboo Curtain, always kept ajar but never swung wide open, has creaked back a little more as it always does at the festive season of the year.

Kirkwood

And over the next month or so more travellers will legally click through the curtain separating Hong Kong from mainland China than in any similar period since the Chinese Communists came to power.

The frontier which seals off the vast territory of the mainland from the tiny British Crown Colony's 400-odd square miles is, in reality, a bit of an enigma.

Admittedly, it's not so easy to pass across as the line separating Canada and the United States and, it's said, the frontier guards on both sides can at times be less than co-operative.

Not Grim

However, on the other hand, the China-Hong Kong border is not the grim, forbidding, inflexible Bamboo Curtain many make it out to be.

It can be bent and it is, especially over the Christmas, New Year and Chinese New Year holidays when tens of thousands of people pass back and forth on special trains running between Hong Kong and Canton.

To an extent, the frontier is fairly open all the time—a fact which puzzles and often even enrages American visitors here for the first time.

A snaking ribbon of powerful steel fence, the frontier stretches about 12 miles across a no-man's land dividing Hong Kong's New Territories and Mainland China, from the village of Sha Tau Kok in the east to the swirling, muddy waters of Deep Bay in the west.

Dotted here and there on both sides are high-powered searchlights, police posts and pill boxes. The border is guarded on the Chinese side by armed soldiers and on the Hong Kong side by armed police—mostly English, Indian and Pakistani, it being the view of the Hong Kong Government that it would not be wise to employ Chinese guards to face their Communist counterparts across the fence.

Yet, despite a certain air of grimness (to be found, to be sure, at any frontier) the border is a quiet area almost entirely free of violence.

In fact, since the vast influx of refugees (or illegal immigrants, as they're politely called here) of 1961, when tens of thousands of Chinese poured into Hong Kong territory of whom thousands had to be sent back, the border has been almost totally free of intruders forcing their way across the line.

These days, almost all escapees from the mainland first make their way across the Pearl River into the Portuguese Overseas Province of Macao and then are smuggled, by junk or sampan, into Hong Kong.

And, since the crisis of 1961, these desperate escape attempts have become less and less common, probably because of a combination of stricter security on both sides, and a general increase in food supplies and standards of living in China.

There have, however, been disturbing rumors here for the last few weeks of an impending mass influx of illegal immigrants similar to the 1961 emergency.

But, although the Hong Kong government has remained typically tight-lipped, there seems to be no basis for such an eventuality and the reports have been largely discounted.

And so the busloads of American tourists toil up the steep hill leading to the police post at the tiny village of Lak Ma Chau where the visitors disembark and gaze in wonder across the meandering Sham Chun River for their first glimpse of the giant of Mainland China.

High Prices

While unscrupulous peddlers sell them soft drinks and gaudy trinkets at outrageous prices and a tape-recorded voice drones out details of the scene before them, the tourists look out across the flat green rice paddies, at two Chinese market towns shimmering white in the sun, at the sails of picturesque junks plying the waters of Deep Bay to the west.

It's a tranquil scene of pastoral serenity and, where just a few years ago thousands fought and clawed their way to safety or, often, to death, only an occasional black speck can be seen toiling in a field or riding a bicycle along a winding country road.

It's a different scene at the frontier railway station of Lo Wu, however, or at the downtown Kowloon terminus of the Kowloon-Canton Railway.

For, to the surprise of many people coming here for the first time—to where, somehow, Communism and democracy manage to live peaceably side by side — the so-called Bamboo Curtain border is open to traffic on both sides every day of the week, every week of the year.

The great bulk of Hong Kong's food supply (and, we might point out, it takes a lot of food to feed almost four million people every day) comes from Mainland China, shipped by train.

There is a flourishing two-way trade in scores of commodities conducted between the mainland and Hong Kong.

And, of course, there is a constant two-way traffic in humans — people crossing the border legally, perhaps to settle either in China or in Hong Kong, perhaps for a short holiday, perhaps just to visit relatives.

More Crossing

More and more people are crossing the frontier, too, as recent figures show, probably because more and more people on both sides are more affluent now and because travel restrictions are less stringent now than they have been in the past.

Between May and September of this year, for instance, 200,000 people crossed from Hong Kong into Mainland China and 200,000 arrived in Hong Cong from the mainland, representing a sharp increase over the figures for the same period in 1964.

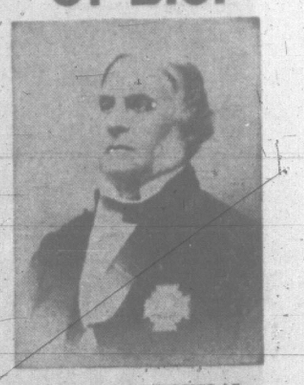
The traffic was averaging about 1,000 people a day each way for the past few weeks.

But, it is expected to increase sharply to more than 10,000 a day as visits are exchanged over the Chinese New Year holidays in January.

Special trains will be added to the schedules, long queues will form outside railway stations and border traffic will be at its peak as thousands of Chinese, bearing parcels and baskets laden with gifts of food and clothes, cross — regardless of politics or ideologies — to spend the holidays with relatives or friends.

Thus, over the festive season, Communist and British authorities manage to make the holidays pleasanter for everyone, in the same manner as Berlin's infamous wall is cracked open at Christmas and Easter.

Founders Of B.C.



SIR JAMES DOUGLAS

Vengeance-seeking Indians, friends of a murderer who had suffered frontier justice from Hudson's Bay Company agents at Fort St. James, captured a young company clerk in 1828 and threatened to kill him. But they accepted a gift of supplies instead and the clerk was freed. Thus James Douglas was spared to become the first governor of the mainland colony of British Columbia.

Born in British Guiana in 1803, this son of a Glasgow merchant entered the fur trade at 15 and later married a factor's daughter of Cree descent. While serving as an accountant at Fort Vancouver on the Columbia River, he rose to the committee of management and was sent to Vancouver Island to establish a fort in 1843. This was the founding of Victoria and ultimately the colony of Vancouver Island.

He succeeded Richard Blanshard as the Island colony governor in 1851 and in 1858 became the first governor of the mainland colony, holding both offices until 1864 when it was felt each colony should have its own authority. Retired and knighted, when the colonies were joined in 1866, he lived only another 11 years and was buried at Victoria.

fied student without a financial barrier. In a press conference, Dr. Deutsch wouldn't say this implies tuition-free university education but merely elimination of financial barriers.

A special survey conducted by the council found that educational attainments of students entering the labor force now are closer to U.S. achievements than they were over many years past. The gap in the past meant that on the whole, the Canadian labor force has less schooling than the American.

"Education is a crucially-important factor," and "the area of greatest need for urgent and effective action" is in manpower and labor market policies, the review said. It repeated last year's urgings that the National Employment Service be strengthened.

Operating at 97 per cent of its potential in 1965, the economy must continue to grow and expand to keep up with the expanding potential the council anticipates in the second half of the 1960s.

COMPARE AIMS, RESULTS

Last year the advisory group's recommendations for the attainment of full prosperity potential by 1970 were:

—1,500,000 new jobs to provide for rapidly - expanding labor force figures and to bring unemployment down to three per cent of the force. Late in 1965 unemployment dropped to 3.2 per cent.

—Annual growth of 5.5 per cent in output for the country as a whole and an increase of 2.4 per cent in output per employed person. In 1965, real national product rose more than six per cent, but per-worker output by apparently a lower amount than the objective, according to incomplete figures for the year.

—Reasonable price stability, which the council suggested would be 1.4-per-cent-a-year increases in consumer prices and two-per-cent increases in all goods and services prices. Prices rose considerably more than this in 1965.

The price increases, the review says, were attributable to special factors which may not recur—including imposition of the federal sales tax on building materials and production machinery.

MAINTAIN PROGRESS

To ward off current threats and maintain sustained progress towards the 1970 goals, the council's second review urges:

—Strong advances in productivity.

—Avoiding investment bottlenecks.

—Efficient use of productive facilities.

—An improved competitiveness and expansion of exports.

—Reasonable over-all price and cost stability.

—Flexibility and adaptability throughout the economy in exploiting new growth opportunities.

Cigarette Price Hike Looms Here

Tax adjustments in Ontario are creating repercussions throughout the Canadian tobacco industry and could cause a cigarette price hike.

Ontario wholesalers and retailers have already pushed the price of fags up one to two cents a pack and up to 30 cents a carton.

But what will happen elsewhere in the country is uncertain.

A spokesman for E. A. Morris Ltd., one of B.C.'s biggest distributors of tobabcco products, said the uncertainty would likely last a week.

"It needs clarification by the manufacturers," he said.

And until specific information is obtained locally, the price of cigarettes will stay where it is.

Cigars were boosted one cent apiece as of Jan. 1.

New stocks of cigarettes being received this week from some manufacturers are costing more.

Some dealers feel cigarettes are a low-profit item, worth only $4 on $100 volume.

In Ontario there is bitter competition in the industry, which may result in daily fluctuation up or down. The 10 to 20 per cent rise in cigar prices was put to higher distributor costs.

The tax adjustment referred to is the abolition of a 3 per cent sales tax and imposition of a 1/20th of a cent tax per cigarette, amounting to almost identical cost.

But where the sales tax previously was borne by retailers, the new tax is at wholesale level and is passed along to retailers.

Soviet Mission Depended On Bomb Pause by U.S.

WASHINGTON — The United States was told by the Soviet Union that if there was a pause in the U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam, a Soviet mission would be sent to Hanoi.

The word passed to Washington did not, however, specify that Alexander Shelepin, a top-ranking Communist party member, would lead the mission, as was subsequently announced. Nor was the aim of the mission disclosed.

The word may have come either prior to the Christmas cease-fire in Viet Nam, when the bombing of the north was halted, or a few days later when Washington was considering resuming the raids.

On Dec. 22, the day the American-South Vietnamese cease-fire was announced, American ambassador Foy Kohler met in Moscow with Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko, a meeting not made public until Dec. 30.

On Dec. 27, officials here were warning against talk of the bombing pause continuing. But that evening there was a high-level meeting accompanied by several phone calls to Washington by President Johnson, then in Texas. The word from Moscow could have come on either occasion.

At any rate, administration officials are now known to have considered the lengthy pause a gamble. But they decided to risk it and the pause has since continued.

At the time of the Moscow announcement it was said that Shelepin would leave "shortly." Later this was amended to say he would leave on Jan. 6. This delay has caused some anxiety in Washington but the president is represented as prepared to keep the bombing pause in effect at least until Shelepin has completed his visit to North Viet Nam.

From the moment of the first public word of the trip, administration officials have denied vigorously that they had any fore-knowledge of the Shelepin travel plans. Today they again denied it and "they can be expected to do so publicly, if asked.

The reason is simple: Any sign of co-ordination between Washington and Moscow is likely to bring new charges from Peking that the two superpowers are acting in cahoots to end the war in Vietnam, as Peking charged in November that Moscow tried to do last May.

Essentially, the administration is conducting a split-level peace offensive. First, there are the publicly known missions to many capitals, public statements from Washington and the public responses in increasing number from Hanoi.

Second, there is the hope that the Soviets, through the Shelepin Mission and by other means, will try to persuade Hanoi that it would be better to move the conflict from the battlefield to the conference table.

Moscow lately has been asserting the importance of its aid to Hanoi in statements taken in Washington to mean it also is asserting its political role there. The administration hope is that such a role will be the crucial factor in convincing Hanoi to accept a conference.

Ship Subsidy Study Presented to Cabinet

OTTAWA (CP)—A report by a committee of government officials on a revised federal shipbuilding subsidy program has been completed and placed before a special cabinet committee for study, it was learned today.

The subsidy program initiated by the former Conservative government was suspended last Feb. 2 when Transport Minister Pickersgill announced that a review had been ordered.

At that time Mr. Pickersgill indicated there would be some modifications in the subsidy, which covered up to 35 per cent of the cost of new ships. In four years about $100,000,000 was paid out.

The ship construction industry has been complaining for months about the suspension, which affected all but new fishing vessels. Although yards had plenty of work last year, due to vessels planned before the subsidy was frozen, a sharp slowdown is feared late this year.

Sources in the government said the report is "rather complex" and it may be a month or so before a new subsidy program is announced. Mr. Pickersgill and Industry Minister Drury head the group that is studying it. Their decision will have to go to the full cabinet for approval.

KOSYGIN INTERVENES

India Refuses To Give Ground

TASHKENT, U.S.S.R. (UPI)—Soviet Premier Alexei Kosygin tonight intervened at India's request for the second consecutive night in the stalemated India-Pakistan talks on Kashmir.

There was speculation Kosygin in his first effort to mediate a dispute between two major non-Communist nations was looking for some give in India's unyielding position on Kashmir.

Indian Prime Minister Lal Bahadur Shastri requested the Kosygin meeting after secret talks during the day with Pakistani President Mohammad Ayub Khan.

Spokesman for both sides reported progress at the meeting but informed sources said they had not yet decided on an agenda for their talks on Kashmir, a subject which brought them to war last fall.

Shasti and Kosygin met Tuesday night in what was described officially as a protocol visit. But informed sources said both men concentrated on Kashmir. The Tass news agency said both meetings were at Shastri's request.

MET ALONE

Shastri and Ayub Khan had met alone for an hour in a suburban Tashkent country house to try to agree on their final agenda.

"It was a constructive meeting," a Pakistani spokesman said. "The two heads of state have made progress."

"The wheels are moving," an Indian spokesman said. "Perhaps they are not moving too fast, but these are very important discussions and it would not be quite justified to expect too big a movement. They are proceeding in the right direction. We have reason to be satisfied."

Christmas Present 'Exchanged'

Salt Spring Island's Lions Club almost received a $178,000 post-Christmas present from the provincial cabinet.

But it was taken back today before it could be delivered and a normal $59,333 grant will be substituted to cover the province's one-third share of an 11-cottage senior citizens' housing project at Ganges.

The project's total cost is $178,000. Through a clerical error, this was the figure specified in an order-in-council providing a grant.

Under the Elderly Citizens' Housing Aid Act B.C. contributes one-third of the cost if the other third is raised by a non-profit society and the balance covered by a federal Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation mortgage.

The project already has been held up by snow so correcting the grant error won't cause any inconvenience.

The contractor, J. L. Peterson Co. Ltd. of Lake Cowichan, will start work as soon as weather permits. Completion of the project will take five or six months.

The project will provide electrically-heated frame cottages to accommodate 18 single pensioners and four couples at low rentals, to be operated by the Gulf Islands Pioneer Village Society formed by the Lions Club.

Architect is James White of Nanaimo.

Kelowna Appeals On Water Supply

The city will be represented by lawyer Brian C. Weddell. H. R. Fretwell will appear for respondents Carruthers & Meile and the Townhouse Developments Ltd.

Jet Crashes Into Sound, General Lost

SEATTLE (AP) — A U.S. Air Force general, alone in a twin-jet plane, apparently went down in Puget Sound Monday only minutes from his destination.

Maj. Gen. I. L. Branch, 53, commanding general of Edwards air force base in California, was making an instrument approach to Boeing Field in Seattle in rainy weather when his T38 jet disappeared from radarscopes shortly before 10:30 a.m.

An extensive search produced no trace of the plane.

There was no report of trouble before the plane was last observed on radar at 3,000 feet over Puget Sound, about five miles northwest of Seattle.

Recent Emigrants Fear Chinese to Enter War

HONG KONG (AP)—A growing number of Chinese in Hong Kong believe Russia's increasing activity in North Viet Nam seriously increases the danger that China will send combat troops into the Viet Nam war.

"The depth of Peking's paranoiac hatred against Russia, and particularly against any Russian presence in Asia, is being underestimated by Westerners," says a well educated Chinese refugee doctor, only 18 months out of China and with most of his family still there.

He was referring to the often expressed belief of Western government officials and diplomats here that China will do everything in its power to keep North Viet Nam fighting—everything, that is, short of sending in combat troops.

CHANGE OPINION

Until recently, most Chinese refugee intellectuals, industrialists and professional men here appeared to agree with that Western appraisal.

Now, however, some of these Chinese—a number of whom still have good contacts on the China mainland—believe Western observers are overestimating Peking's ability to think realistically in the face of the Chinese Communists' hatred for Russia.

They say their contacts inside China indicate the Communist hierarchy is in a state of what one caled "an unreasoning fury because Russian military aid—particuary the surface-to-air missiles which have been shooting down American planes over North Viet Nam—is much more effective than Chinese military aid."

LBJ Seeking $13 Billion For War Cost

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson plans to ask Congress next week for an extra appropriation of almost $13,000,000,000 to cover the costs of the Viet Nam war, sources report.

The money would be for the fiscal year ending next June 30, but only about $5,000,000,000 of the total is slated for actual expenditure by then, to replace military stocks.

One source said the remainder of the funds is being sought "in case we need it in Viet Nam—that's the best way of putting it." He said it was a matter of prudence rather than planning for an extended military operation.

Added to the $1,700,000,000 voted by Congress last August and $700,000,000 approved in May, the new appropriation would bring the total for increased action in Viet Nam to $14,000,000,000 plus.

Reports of the request for extra money came as the lull in the bombing of North Viet Nam headed into its 13th day—a lull that Senator Richard B. Russell (Dem.-Georgia), says may be extended for two more weeks. Russell heads the Senate armed services committee.

Body Hunt Sought

BUENOS AIRES (Reuters)—Argentine President Illia has been asked to have the River Plate dredged for the body of Eva Peron, wife of Argentina's one-time strongman Juan Peron now in exile. Paulino Niembro, Peronist leader in the Chamber of Deputies, cabled the request after a local magazine claimed to know where the embalmed body lay. The whereabouts of the body has been a mystery since it was removed from a shrine shortly after Peron was ousted in September, 1955.

Mothers. Now an Effective Cough Syrup That Children Love to Take

Pleasant-tasting Jack & Jill Cough Syrup with added Vitamin C Works wonders—children love it.

One of the most disturbing sounds a mother can hear is her child coughing at night. A nagging cough from a cold seems so much worse when it's irritating a child. The throat membranes of children are more sensitive, more easily hurt.

This is why W. K. Buckley spent years perfecting his special cough syrup for children. His time and trouble have been well rewarded. Today, Jack & Jill Cough Syrup helps more children's coughs than any other product in Canada. There are a number of very good reasons why Jack & Jill Cough Syrup is preferred by most Canadian Mothers.

The carefully selected ingredients in Jack & Jill Cough Syrup are double-acting. They relieve the congestion that causes so much trouble, and they relieve irritated throat membranes, making it easier for the child to swallow. Jack & Jill eases the irritation and lets your child rest comfortably.

Children like Jack & Jill. The mild, wild-cherry taste gives this cough syrup the pleasant flavour that children like so well. Jack & Jill Cough Syrup is both a treat and a treatment. And every dose of Jack & Jill contains added Vitamin C . . . the vitamin children specially need when they are feverish.

Jack & Jill Cough Syrup for children is sold everywhere. Ask for it by name.

LIFE SAVED BY KREBIOZEN?

Cancer Drug Supported

CHICAGO (AP)—A mother and father told a jury Tuesday in 1951 a doctor informed them cancer would kill their son in six months. The son, a krebiozen user, now is 26.

William and Mildred Cathcart, of Cheyenne, Wyo., appeared as defence rebuttal witnesses in the conspiracy and fraud trial of four promoters of krebiozen.

Their son, Gary, appeared as a witness earlier in the trial and declared: "I feel fine."

The parents related that in March, 1951, Gary underwent surgery at the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minn. Afterward the surgeon, Dr. John Kirkland, visited them.

They quoted the doctor as estimating the boy had six weeks to six months to live.

PRODUCE LETTERS

Defence counsel produced two letters written by Mrs. Cathcart.

In one dated Nov. 29, 1952, Mrs. Cathcart told trustees of the University of Illinois that after Mayo Clinic doctors said Gary's case was hopeless, he was cured by krebiozen treatments administered by Dr. John F. Pick of Chicago.

One of the defendants, Dr. Andrew C. Ivy, formerly was a vice-president of the university. He is the chief medical sponsor of krebiozen.

The others on trial in U.S. district court are Dr. Stevan Durovic, discoverer of krebiozen; his brother, Marko, a lawyer and his financial backer, and Dr. William F. P. Phillips, a general practitioner.

Explosive Cargo Secured

HOLYHEAD, Wales (Reuters) — The crew of a Dutch coaster wallowing in the gale-lashed Irish Sea battled for two hours early today to secure a shifting cargo of drums containing highly explosive chemicals.

The drums, stored as deck cargo aboard the 499-ton vessel Ingkabir, bound from Liverpool to Cork, began to move when the coaster was about 20 miles southwest of the Isle of Anglesay.

Holyhead coast guards and lifeboats were alerted after the ship sent out urgent distress signals saying: "Dangerous deck cargo on the move — all ships keep clear — danger of explosion."

But the Ingkabir cancelled her distress messages two hours later and said the deck cargo had been secured.

Charge Improperly Laid

An improperly laid charge resulted in acquittal for a man in central court Tuesday.

William A. Brown, address unavailable, was charged with "unlawfully" obstructing police officer Donald Milton Dec. 10 at the Drake Hotel, 536 Johnson St.

Magistrate William Ostler and defence counsel Dermond Owen-Flood noted the charge should have read "wilfully" obstructed.

"I hadn't noticed that," commented prosecutor Peter Birkett.

He had earlier amended the charge to read "on or about" Dec. 10 because of confusion of the time of the alleged offence.

DISPUTE

Court was told Brown became involved in a dispute with beer parlor proprietor Baxter Bennett and Constable Milton was investigating.

Const. Milton testified Brown told him he had been assaulted by Mr. Bennett and he had placed him under citizen's arrest.

While the constable was explaining the citizen's arrest procedure, Brown told them he was placing them all under arrest, court was told.

Then while the officer was taking names, Brown hit him on the back "with his arm and forearm in a manner to gain my attention."

He grabbed his hand while he was writing, he added.

At one point in the trial, Magistrate Ostler said he did not understand "why the constable didn't just say 'just go along,' to the man."

The prosecution failed to state why Brown was arrested, he said.

Children Panic

LIMA, Peru (Reuters) — Fifteen children were seriously injured when a movie audience at Sullana, about 700 miles north of here, panicked and stampeded after a member of the audience shouted "earthquake," said police reports reaching here Monday.

Boosts Average 6.3%

VANCOUVER (CP) — Final results of compulsory arbitrations show B.C. teachers averaged salary increases of 6.3 per cent for 1966. Salaries for all 84 school districts now have been set.

'The Making of a Mountie'

RUM-RUNNERS TO DOUKS HE CHASED THEM ALL

By GLEN ALLEN

Christen Junget stands at the window of his room in the Empress Hotel and looks out at the snowy Sooke hills.

"Yes, I suppose I'm a prehistoric animal," he says.

He turns from the window and points to a photograph on the wall.

"That's me 30 years ago."

The picture is of a tall, smiling, already aging man in a gold-braided RCMP uniform.

"That was my last post," he says, "Halifax. I was assistant commissioner when I retired . . . in charge of three Maritime provinces. It was an awful mouthful of work running after the rum-runners. I didn't know a thing about ships in those days."

A ship's bell rings the hour.

"They gave that to me when I left."

On a table is a leather fold-out holding snapshots, some of them turning brown.

"I call this little portfolio 'the making of a Mountie'," he says.

PILLBOX HAT

The first photo is of a young man in the pillbox hat of a Northwest Mounted Police officer.

"I came here," he explains, "in 1899 from Denmark. And the same year I joined the old Northwest Mounted. After training in Regina I was posted to Yorkton. We didn't have limousines in those days. Travel was some sport. We lived in the saddle.

"A year after I got there, the Doukhobors came. About 7,000 of them. Everything went lovely for awhile. And except for their religious fanatics it would have stayed that way."

But a lot of them didn't like the territorial laws. Saskatchewan wasn't a province in those days—and they refused to register marriages and deaths or to send their children to school.

SCARE OFF BIRDS

"I remember riding up to their farms and hearing an ungodly caterwauling. It was the Doukhobor children, kept out of school to scare off the blackbirds.

"We were mighty glad to see the ones that were bitten by that crazy bug go farther west," Mr. Junget recalls.

He was everything in the Mounties except Commissioner.

JUNGET
. . . travel was sport

Mr. Junget sits still for a moment. He isn't one to blow his own trumpet.

There are other pictures in his room. Pictures of the sea. Pictures of his wife who died 12 years ago. Pictures of daughters who live in Victoria. Pictures of strange wooden groups of figures on flat land, standing against lapboard prairie houses. Pictures of other Mounties. A model of the famed Bluenose.

CATCHING SMUGGLERS

As Assistant Commissioner in the Maritimes, he took over the duties of the provincial police in Nova Scotia, New Brunswick and Prince Edward Island.

"Besides that, there was this Federal Government Preventive Service. Catching smugglers. They were coming up the coast, mostly at night and with full advantage of the coast, which is more indented than B.C.'s."

They were underselling the local liquor vendors and the Maritimers loved them.

"We had 27 ships, six seaplanes and daily tri-service councils of war, the whole works," Mr. Junget says.

One job he looks back on with a delight was in 1902 when he was a corporal. He was among the contingent of 25 officers sent to Edward VII's coronation.

"You could call that a highlight. In my time I've sworn allegiance to Victoria, Edward VII and George V. I retired before George's sons were crowned."

EXTRADITION CASES

His biggest adventure?

"I guess it was the extradition cases. We were often sent to England to retrieve men wanted by the courts back home.

"We had to locate the fellow we wanted, and prove in a British court that it was the right man and that he had done something wrong. Then we waited for an appeal and then waited on the indulgence of the Home Secretary himself.

"I didn't mind so much the waiting. Even though it was a month or so, I spent the time well, going to Scotland Yard fingerprinting school, looking at London.

"But when I applied to the Home Secretary for a warrant of commitment it was sometimes a nervous business.

"I had to receive from the secretary's own hands the paper signing the man over to me personally. Once it was Herbert John Gladstone, the prime minister's son, and another time—well, here, look at this."

He has a weathered typewritten document. It reads in part:

"I authorize you, Inspector Christen Junget of the RCMP, to take this man back to that part of his Majesty's Dominion called Canada."

It is signed and dated June 1, 1911.

"You see the Home Secretary had to hand it to me in person, which this time, as other times, he did."

The signature at the bottom of the page reads, Winston Leonard Spencer Churchill.

Out the window of Christen Junget's room the sky is a little darker. The hills still shine bright with snow. If Christen Junget is prehistoric, he is prehistoric like the hills. Not old, but knowing and apart. Wise.

AT LIBRARY

Nuisance Regulation Abandoned

Victoria Public Library has abandoned its "nuisance" regulation demanding a $2 deposit and a six month waiting period from prospective members.

George McBride, head of the circulation department, said the change had been planned for some time.

"We have been wanting to do away with these anachronisms for some time," he said. "It was frankly a nuisance and has been a headache for our bookkeeping department for years."

Visitors to the city can now apply for temporary membership without supplying two references or paying a $2 deposit.

All they are required to do is supply reasonable identification, their home address and their temporary address in Victoria.

Residents of the city can obtain immediate membership by identifying themselves with a current driver's licence, credit card or utilities bill.

The new system is already in effect at the main branch of the library and will be instituted at the Town and Country Shopping Centre branch when it opens on Saturday.

POLICY REMAINS UNDER NEW MINISTER

Immigrant 'Picking' to Continue

By GERARD McNEIL

OTTAWA (CP) — Indications are that a developing Canadian policy of selective immigration will continue under new minister Jean Marchand.

Intense studies of the labor market have suggested that many skilled immigrants are needed fast if the economy is to be kept in high gear.

The immigration act itself has been the subject of minute scrutiny in the last year by officials working on a policy statement.

The white paper, in its final stages when Mr. Marchand became minister last month, would be presented to Parliament as a prelude to sweeping changes in the act. Whether or not Mr. Marchand will be able to digest the proposals in time to present them to the forthcoming Parliament isn't known. However he said in a recent interview the present 13-year-old act gives "dangerous discretion" to an immigration minister and needs to be re-drafted. Emphasis was given to selective immigration under former minister John R. Nicholson in the last year.

OPEN NEW CENTRES

The department is setting up a $500,000 European service and is opening offices in the Far East. It has been carrying out labor market studies in co-operation with provincial labor department.

In a prepared statement Monday, Mr. Marchand said:

"Selective immigration is a dynamic force in an expanding economy provided that it is coupled with a manpower policy designed to make the fullest use of existing human resources.

"The association of immigration and Manpower Services in one department will further this purpose."

The association began this week when Mr. Marchand became responsible not only for immigration but for former labor department programs-manpower mobility, vocational and technical training and retraining and the national employment service.

The forthcoming Parliament will be asked by the government to create a manpower department—in effect the one Mr. Marchand now heads.

Making manpower policies effective will be Mr. Marchand's first task. Another priority job will be bringing the immigration act into line with the new policies.

The act has been a thorn in the side of successive ministers since it came into effect in June, 1953.

Initially it gave wide powers to department officers to reject immigrants for various reasons—cultural background, economic factors, ability to adjust.

But the Supreme Court of Canada ruled in 1956 that the cabinet exceeded its legal authority in delegating such powers to civil servants. The solution was to define in new regulations the classes of persons who could be admitted.

This provided for admission of immigrants on their own merits and admission of broad range of relatives "sponsored" by these generally skilled immigrants.

The classes were found to be so rigid that they barred many persons who simply couldn't be fitted into a category.

As a result, special orders-in-council have been passed by the cabinet to admit thousands of immigrants who otherwise couldn't have come to Canada.

Meanwhile, sponsored immigration developed into a problem.

One Portuguese worker admitted on the basis of his own skills sponsored 23 others, five of them related only by marriage and a few of them educated.

An attempt in 1959 by former minister Ellen Fairclough to restrict the categories of sponsorable immigrants was revoked in a storm of protest from ethnic communities.

Economists fear the flow of sponsored immigrants is building up a pool of unemployable persons.

A limitation on sponsored immigration, which now amounts to half the flow to Canada, is expected to be a feature of a new act.

Life Can Be Bowl of Cherries Income Tax Appeal Board Rules

OTTAWA (CP)—The tax appeal board has come to the defence of a British Columbia magistrate who found life was anything but a bowl of cherries under the revenue department's intepretation of tax law.

Donald M. White of Okanagan Mission, near Kelowna, B.C., lodged the appeal to the board when the revenue department said he could not deduct his farming losses on a three-acre cherry orchard from his other income.

Mr. White cared for the orchard in the early morning and evening hours while serving as a police magistrate and in other public appointments.

He planted the cherry trees in 1962 after scab infested a producing apple orchard, which he had to destroy. He didn't expect to harvest a crop of cherries until the coming 1966 season, and claimed farming expenses for the 1963 tax year.

The revenue department argued in general terms that Mr. White wasn't really a farmer, since he lived on the three-acre piece of land and the orchard in its view was little more than a landscaping project.

BOARD DISAGREES

More specifically, the revenue department argued the orchard couldn't be regarded as a farming operation in 1963 because it wasn't producing cherries.

"I have difficulty in following this line of reasoning," said tax appeal board member W. O. Davis in this written decision.

"I do not think there is any doubt that the appellant (Mr. White) was farming in the 1950s when he was able to harvest crops of apples, even though his expenses from combatting scab infestion may have prevented his operation from showing any actual profit.

"His present inability to harvest a crop of cherries cannot be said to be due to lack of farming effort or intention on his part. It is due solely to the immaturity of the trees which he was forced to plant as replacements for his apple trees."

Mr. Davis ordered the revenue department to reassess Mr. White's income tax return for 1963 and allow him to deduct farming expenses amounting to $343.91, plus an allowance for the capital cost of some of the new trees.

Chaplin Jr. Working For Father

LONDON (AP) — Michael Chaplin, 19, son of Charlie Chaplin, has foresaken his beatnik life and his beard for a job with his father's new movie project —under an alias.

He has been working with the production unit of the movie, tentatively called "A Countess from Hong Kong," for about a month. He is using the name Michael James.

Michael's job gives a hint of reconciliation with his father after a series of rifts last year.

Asked whether there has been a reconciliation, the young Chaplin said: "I don't want to make any statements about myself."

He is working on the movie as an assistant producer.

As for the alias he is using, a spokesman for the movie company said:

"I guess Michael used the assumed name because he did not want any publicity.

The movie, featuring Sophia Loren and Marlon Brando, is expected to start shooting at studios outside London in a few months.

Popes Tried to End Second World War

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—An American historian said last week the late Pope Pius XII and the present Pope Paul VI directed the risky task of using the Vatican for underground attempts to end the Second World War.

Harold C. Deutsch, a professor at the University of Minnesota, told the American Historical Association Pope Pius acted as an intermediary between a group of dissident German officials and Britain early in the war.

Deutsch said he gathered his information in interviews with key figures whom he did not name.

A group of Germans opposed to Adolf Hitler and the war approached Pope Pius through a contact Deutsch identified as Josef Mueller, a lawyer and a leader of Catholic resistance to the Nazis.

Deutsch said the purpose of the interchange of messages was to avert Germany's offensive in France by promoting a military coup in Germany. When the mission failed because the German dissidents would not revolt, Deutsch said, Britain and France allegedly were warned of the attack coming in 1940.

This warning, Deutsch said, was passed along to the British and French by Msgr. Giovanni Battista Montini, now Pope Paul VI.

Lecture Tour In U.S. For Dr. Carl

Two nature societies, one from each side of the 49th parallel, will sponsor a three-week lecture tour of California and Arizona next month by Provincial Museum director Dr. Clifford Carl.

The B.C. cabinet Tuesday gave permission for Dr. Carl to make the trip, which will be paid jointly by the Canadian Audubon Society and the National Audubon Society.

Dr. Carl will use color motion pictures produced by the museum to illustrate his talks on conservation of all forms of marine and fresh-water wildlife during the Feb. 7-25 trip.

He will visit Berkeley, Sacramento, Palo Alto, San Jose, Pacific Grove, Santa Barbara, Los Angeles, San Diego and Palm Springs in California. In Arizona, his lectures will be at Sedon, Tucson and Phoenix.

STAY-AT-HOME BIRDS POSE PROBLEM

'Friends of the Ducks' Angry

CALGARY (CP) — Winter-loving ducks are creating a problem here, and an argument between duck-lovers and wildlife officials as to how to handle it.

The Friends of the Ducks Committee headed by John Gillespie, an industrial plant security guard, says thousands of ducks wintering on the Bow River are dying of starvation and cold.

Some birds have been frozen into the river ice and eaten alive by magpies because they were too cold and weak to seek food or protection, Mr. Gillespie says.

The committee contends the ducks should be fed.

Bob Webb, biologist with the Alberta fish and wildlife division, said Tuesday he doubted many were in danger of starving.

"I've been looking for dead birds and have seen only two." He estimated the number still in Calgary at 4,000, not the 6,000 the committee says are here.

Feeding the ducks, said Mr. Webb, will only encourage more to winter here, endangering air traffic at nearby McCall Airport and creating greater feed problems.

The stay-at-home syndrome reached a climax last winter, when Mr. Gillespie says his group fed 30,000.

Last fall federal and provincial governments exploded noisemakers to scare the ducks off the river. They also stopped feed at the Inglewood Bird Sanctuary and urged citizens not to feed them. Mr. Gillespie says his group and others complied with the request.

"Our sympathies are with the ducks too, but we're more interested in saving people from flocks endangering air traffic," Mr. Webb said.

He said more noisemakers will be used to boost the die-hards southward.

Russian Skating Champion Slain

MOSCOW (UPI) — World speedskating champion Inga Voronina has geen knifed to death and her husband is under arrest in connection with the slaying, it was learned today.

Informed sources said Sergei Voronina, trainer of the Soviet skating team, was being held in the fatal stabbing of his 29-year-old wife, allegedly during a fight in their Moscow apartment.

Soviet officials confirmed Mrs. Voronina's death, but refused details.

Mrs. Voronina won the world speedskating championship four times, the first in 1957 and the last in 1965 at the world meet in Oulu, Finland. In 1962, she set four world records.

Illness prevented her from appearing in the Olympic Games, both in 1960 and 1964.

Shortage of Skilled Labor Seen Threat to Prosperity

OTTAWA (CP)—The current shortage of skilled labor probably will grow worse over the next five years and could jeopardize Canada's continued prosperity if it is not remedied quickly, the Economic Council of Canada advises.

The council urged the government to give urgent priority to new manpower and labor-market policies, calling this "the area of greatest need for urgent and effective action."

The council's second annual review of the economy placed repeated emphasis on the mounting shortage of management, professional and technically-skilled labor.

As a vital first step, it suggested creation of a strong central agency—even a new government department — to run the manpower programs now scattered through various departments and to prepare new ones.

The report was written before Prime Minister Pearson's announcement Dec. 17 that a new manpower department is being established under Jean Marchand, former Quebec labor leader, who was taken into the cabinet last month as immigration minister.

DECISION NOT KNOWN

Dr. John J. Deutsch, chairman of the Economic Council, told a press conference there had been prior discussions between the council and the government on the question of a federal manpower agency, raised originally in last year's economic review. But Mr. Pearson's decision was not known when the report went to the printers early in December.

Other recommendations in today's report, all repeated from its first report last year, called for:

- Revitalization of the National Employment Service to expand its job-placement role to that of a full manpower counselling agency.
- More and better programs for the retraining of adult workers.
- More adequate labor market information, particularly on job vacancies.
- An improved manpower mobility plan, stressing grants rather than repayable loans.

The council said the vocational school expansion programs of recent years are only part of the answer to the problem of manpower shortages.

"There has not been any significant breakthrough in the training or retraining of existing members of the labor force. The need for a major thrust in this area is all the more important since it will take decades to raise the level of skills of the total labor force if training is largely limited to younger persons."

SHORTCOMINGS

A continuous program for retraining workers and improving their technical skills was essential in the process of dynamic and sustained economic growth.

Current programs of this nature were riddled with deficiencies and shortcomings.

There was a lack of public knowledge about them, trained vocational teachers were not being turned out in sufficient numbers and allowances paid to trainees were discouraging enrolment.

Too often the type of training being supplied was outdated by changes in technology. Timetables and facilities were not suitable for adults. Provincial or local authorities lacked information on developing manpower needs.

"Beause many authorities are involved, the responsibility for the initiation of programs is often not clear. Consequently, programs that are needed do not get implemented."

It criticized the new manpower mobility program under which certain workers can get assistance to move to new job areas. This program provides grants to one category of workers, repayable loans to another.

The council felt the loan feature was self-defeating, tending to penalize the enterprising worker. Only out right grants should be used to encourage labor mobility.

SURVEY URGED

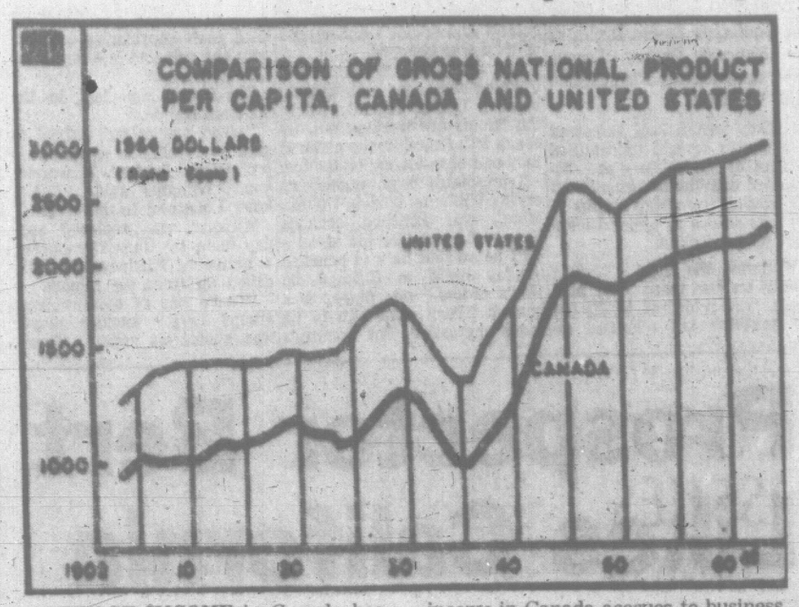
On the question of labor market information, it said the new manpower department and the Dominion Bureau of Statistics should begin a regular survey of job vacancies as soon as possible. This was essential to operation of a proper manpower program.

Admitting the technical difficulties involved in such a step, the council noted that U.S. government agencies have tested such a job-vacancy survey and the results have been promising.

The better the information gathered, the easier it would be to match labor demand and supply in the current tight market.

The report said labor and management have a key role along with government in meeting the manpower shortage.

Employers should introduce and step up on-the-job training plans.



AVERAGE INCOME in Canada has increased during this century but remains persistently and substantially below average income in the United States. The Economic Council of Canada suggests some of the factors as: (1) a higher proportion of the national income in Canada accrues to business capital; (2) a lower proportion of Canada's population is engaged in the labor force; (3) and in industry shorter production runs and the effects of climate and distance. Jobless Loans Blasted

OTTAWA (CP) — Sharp criticism of the loan feature in the government's new manpower mobility program, under which certain workers are assisted in moving to new job areas, was voiced today by the Economic Council of Canada.

The council, in its second annual economic review, said it has "serious reservations" about the decision to make one category of workers eligible for outright grants and another group eligible only for loans, repayable over two years.

SELF-DEFEATING

"According to the government's announcement, workers who have been unemployed for four of the previous six months will qualify for a grant, whereas workers who have been unemployed for any period of time less than this will receive loans.

"Apart from the difficulties which must surely arise in administering these two kinds of assistance, it seems to us that the loan feature of the program will prove self-defeating.

"For example, a loan of $500 to $1,000 for a family of several dependents, repayable over a two-year period, may appear to an unemployed worker a formidable debt to contract before he and his family move to a new and perhaps uncertain economic environment.

SEEN A PENALTY

"Furthermore, this system . . . would tend to penalize the more enterprising individual who seeks to shorten the duration of his unemployment."

The council said it considers a mobility allowance plan of vital importance. But it felt mobility should be encouraged by grants rather than loans, with appropriate safeguards to avoid abuses.

The report, dated December, also noted that the government plan was announced last spring but had not yet gone into effect when the report was written.

"It is difficult to understand the delay in putting this program into operation. This delay has resulted in unnecessary manpower bottlenecks."

The labor department announced Dec. 15 that the program would begin Dec. 28.

It pays, either in the form of a grant or loan, the full cost of moving a worker, his family and household goods.

An added resettlement allowance of up to $1,000 also is available, again as a loan or grant depending on the worker's category.

Papers Controlled

JAKARTA (Reuters) — The English-language Indonesian Herald reported Monday that six Jakarta newspapers, including itself, have become official organs of the government. The others are Dwikora, Genta, Berdikari, Antagan Bersendjat, Berita Yudha and another now under preparation.

RATES TOP PRIORITY, SAYS COUNCIL

Aid to Education Is Vital

OTTAWA (CP) — Investment in education should get top priority in Canada because it is crucially important to growth of the economy and to higher living standards, says the Economic Council of Canada.

The council said in its second annual review that one step needing immediate attention is rapid, substantial expansion of education after high school so that no qualified student faces any financial barrier to higher education.

At the same time, high schools and teaching should be improved immediately to the point where all Canadians will have the chance to receive a secondary school education.

After taking a hard look at education in Canada and the United States as a factor in the economy, the review concludes that Canadians get considerably less formal education than Americans and are fast falling farther behind.

This seemed to be an important reason for lower living standards and lower productivity in Canada.

VITAL TO WELFARE

Dr. John J. Deutsch, council chairman, told a press conference that education is vital to the welfare of Canada.

Human resources were the most important factor in a nation's productivity. Most fundamental of all in investing in human resources was education.

"So we say that all should go to high school. And we go further and say that there should be no financial barrier to anyone in going to university."

The review says attention must be focused on five main areas to advance educational levels:

- Gaps in high school facilities need to be closed where they are "seriously inadequate" for some parts of the population and in some parts of the country.
- High school drop-outs must be reduced. More students must be kept in high school to raise the rate of high school graduation.
- In the face of an unprecedented upsurge in the number of young people, tremendous expansion is required in university and post - secondary technical school enrolment.
- Faster development of post-graduate facilities at the university level—"the level at which we have made least progress to date in the Canadian education system" — is needed for a sharply-increasing flow of professional and highly-skilled manpower.
- Vigorous efforts are necessary to improve the quality and methods of education.

"Intensified efforts in these critical areas of education will require a great enlargement of resources in education."

Dr. Deutsch said it's up to the governments with responsibility for education to act. The council does not suggest that this responsibility be shifted to Ottawa from the provincial governments.

The council says also there is a general need to upgrade and bring up to date the education and skill qualifications of the existing labor force, including management and professional workers.

Manpower shortages and deficiences in particular skills constituted an existing or impending obstacle to maintaining economic growth. Immediate action was needed urgently to deal with this, involving retraining and continuing education.

The council estimates that the return to the economy from investment in education is perhaps 10 or 15 per cent, a better return than investment in physical and financial assets.

PEARSON URGES:

Hold Wages, Prices Line

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson called Tuesday night on labor and management to restrain pressures for higher wages and prices during 1966.

He said in a television interview the main problem facing Canada in 1966 is maintaining and prolonging the current expansion while containing inflationary pressures.

★ ★ ★

"If the expansion gets out of control, through the inability of governments to contain inflationary pressures, that would do a great deal of damage to the people of the country," he said.

The prime minister said he was sure Canadian labor "will show the same sense of responsibility and restraint it has shown over the years, and that it will not make demands on the economy which would not only harm the economy but harm it by harming the economy."

Mr. Pearson added: "This same sense of responsibility and restraint has to be shown by capital, by employers, and it has to be shown by governments as well."

OTTAWA (CP)—The period of economic expansion now nearly five years old may run another five and any recession is likely to be short and shallow, the Economic Council of Canada says in its second annual review.

The expansionist tendencies behind the economy since the spring of 1961 are still strong, says the review. If a recession does interrupt the upward thrust, it likely will be the result of inventory adjustment.

Economists measure expansion and recession by peaks and troughs in a number of economic indicators — employment, production, capital investment and the like.

The great depression of the 1930s, for instance, shows up on economic graphs of industrial production as a peak reached in mid-summer of 1928 and a long downward-sloping line which hit bottom about mid-summer of 1933.

IMPROVEMENT

Then a general improvement was recorded until the summer of 1937 when another slump occurred, followed by steady gains through the war years.

The council's review notes that since the Second World War the periods of expansion have been longer and times of recession have been shorter than before the war. The current expansionary period is the longest since the war.

IN CYCLES

Economists have long known—as businessmen seem to know by instinct—that the prosperity of business conditions moves in cycles. Capital investment in new plants and equipment has a big influence on the cycle. At the first sign or suspicion of a recession, businessmen become leary of adding to their plants.

Economists have also discovered that there is a secondary cyclical wave which normally has a much longer time between peak and trough, measuring activity in the construction industry.

As Chairman Deutsche explained it to reporters, one of the significant features of the current expansionary period has been a long lag in construction. Recently, however, demand for construction had mounted and the cycle for the industry now was riding high.

This has the effect of reinforcing the general business cycle, contributing to the council's view that it will continue.

Shell Plans Early Start In Oil Hunt

CALGARY (CP) — Shell Canada Ltd. says it will start its fourth season of seismic exploration work in waters off the West Coast early in January.

It will be the first time that geophysical work has been conducted in Canadian offshore waters during winter months, William L. Grossman, Vice-President of exploration and production, said in an announcement Monday.

Previous offshore seismic programs in search of petroleum in the Shell Permit area of some 13,000,000 acres was between April and September, Mr. Grossman said.

Three boats using gas exploder and conventional seismic techniques will be employed. A fourth vessel for observers of the federal fisheries department will accompany the operation.

Mr. Grossman also announced that a $9,000,000 semi-submersible drilling vessel, now being built at Victoria, will be used in Shell's exploratory drilling operations off the West Coast late in 1966.

The 16,800-ton vessel is designed to withstand the worst storm that could be expected off the west coast and will permit exploratory drilling in waters up to 800 feet deep.

Canadian Demands Outstrip Supply

OTTAWA (CP) — The Economic Council of Canada offers some advice to the new finance minister — the next budget should stimulate productivity more than demand or employment.

While Finance Minister Sharp is not mentioned specifically, the council's annual review outlines the fiscal policies it considers appropriate in the next federal budget, now being prepared.

"Under current conditions, policies having a productivity-stimulating effect should be given increasing relative priority," says the council's review.

Chairman Dr. Deutsch told a press conference the reason for this suggestion is that the Canadian economy shows signs that demand for goods and services are on the point of outstripping capacity to supply them.

In some isolated instances, demand already had outstripped supply—the construction industry. That's why the council supported the government's policy of trying to stretch out public spending in the construction field.

Green 'Kills' Them

Boston Belter Delights Some, Annoys Others

BOSTON (AP)—Through no fault of their own, Boston Bruins have one of the hottest properties in the National Hockey League—by Boston standards—in defenceman Ted Green.

Although Boston has won just one game in 16 starts, Green is awakening fan interest in the Bruins all around the six-team circuit by raising the eyebrows of league officials.

The 25-year-old native of St. Boniface, Man., recently missed six weeks play due to a persistent virus that left him weak. During that period the opposition made eight and 10-goal performances against the Bruins the rule rather than the exception.

SPARKED BRUINS

Green returned Christmas night. The 200-pound defenceman's aggressive play put some spark in the Bruins and they whipped New York Rangers 4-? with Green figuring in three of the goals.

The following night, Dec. 26, Boston played a return engagement against the Rangers at New York and the game resulted in the soft-spoken Green being branded the league's bad boy.

In order, Green was assessed a two-minute penalty for high-sticking, a 10-minute misconduct for disputing the call, an interference penalty, a five-minute major for spearing Ranger Phil Goyette, another high-sticking infraction, another major for fighting and an automatic misconduct for receiving two major penalties in one game.

LEADS IN PENALTIES

The total of 36 minutes raised his time in the penalty box to 87 minutes, a high in the league this season.

The following game at Chicago the same referee, John Ashley, continued to watch Green, calling two more minor penalties and another misconduct.

The president of the Rangers, Bill Jennings, called for a league curb on Green's aggressiveness but NHL president Clarence Campbell declined to assess any monetary penalties after reading Ashley's report on the New York game.

Green had drawn $75 in automatic fines.

PROBLEM FOR ADAMS

However, Campbell asked the Bruins Tuesday to help curb their defenceman's aggressiveness.

The message presented a problem for Bruins' owner Weston Adams. Players like Green have kept the turnstiles humming at Boston Garden through six years of last-place performances.

Boston fans have learned to enjoy hockey as it's played in the cellar by subscribing to this theory: If they can't play good hockey, at least they can win the brawls.

The league will see how much Boston intends to curb Green Thursday night when the Bruins play at Detroit's Olympia where they haven't won a game since Dec. 17, 1964.

A SCHOCK-ING SEAL

Seemingly without worry, San Francisco Seal forward Ron Schock relaxes and lets Victoria coach Frank Mario (rear) wear worried look prior to tonight's Western Hockey League engagement at Memorial Arena. Ron's obviously aware of Seals' unblemished record on Victoria ice—two ties and a win. (Times photo by Irving Strickland.)

'Show-Offs' on Stage As Imlach Comes Here

For those who want to, tonight can be "show-off" time at Memorial Arena.

San Francisco Seals want to.

So do Victoria Maple Leafs.

The Western Hockey League result, therefore, may be decided on the whims of individuals.

Victoria's individuals can show off for the benefit of George Imlach, the leader of all the Leafs where'er they may be.

The Toronto general manager arrived on the West Coast Tuesday for a peek at his farm stock. And others, just in case they may become available.

Imlach will take in tonight's game and then accompany the Leafs to California for games Thursday (in Los Angeles) and Friday (in San Francisco).

Even the Seals are allowed to play up to Imlach. But the frisky (in Memorial Arena, at least) 'Friscans are more interested in playing for their own people ... like manager Norman Poile, who signs the cheques, and coach Charlie Burns, who decides who earns the pay.

Seals, unbeaten on Victoria ice this season, will have to preserve their record without the playing services of Burns. Checked out of a San Francisco hospital late Tuesday after undergoing treatment for a bad back, Burns was expected to arrive in town today to take over coaching duties. But he won't play.

Leafs will be bolstered by the return of defenceman Claude Labrosse. Loaned to Rochester last month, Labrosse arrived in Victoria today and is scheduled to step right into action tonight.

Game time is 8:15.

Eskimos Sign Coach For Two More Years

EDMONTON (CP) — Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Football Conference have announced two changes in the coaching and management staff.

President Hugh McColl said the club is looking for a young general manager. Former Manager Joe Ryan will become assistant to the president, acting in an advisory capacity to the president and board of directors.

Assistant coach Len Younce has been released and will return to the U.S., McColl said. No immediate replacement was announced and Younce said he has no definite plans.

Head coach Neill Armstrong has signed a contract for another two years, with an option in 1967 to renew for another year. No salary was announced.

Greater Spoils For Golf Champs

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP)—The purse for the Tournament of Champions' golf event has been boosted to $100,000 from $75,000 sports director Bo Wininger of the host Desert Inn Country Club said Tuesday.

The tournament will be held April 14 to 17, the week following the Masters at Augusta, Ga. and three weeks earlier than usual.

L.A. Open Kicks Off '66 Trail

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The 1966 golfing wars start today with a pro-amateur prelude to the $70,000 Los Angeles Open.

The 40th annual Los Angeles fixture kicks off the winter campaign each year. Today's exercise carries an additional $5,000 to be split by the pros.

Prominent in the picture is Paul Harney, winner of the last two tournaments here, and Bill Casper Jr., Arnold Palmer and Tony Lema.

Missing are Gary Player of South Africa, the 1965 U.S. Open champion, and Jack Nicklaus, last year's leading money winner who makes a point of skipping this event each winter.

The setting is the Rancho municipal golf course, 7,000 yards in length, with par 36-35—71.

Forty of the top 50 PGA money winners were entered, including Art Wall Jr., Gene Littler, Julius Boros, Tommy Bolt, Bo Wininger, Mike Souchak, Mason Rudolph and Doug Sanders.

PARTIAL TO SOME . . . . . . DOUR WITH OTHERS

Bruins Unhappy With Hap

TORONTO (CP)—The Globe and Mail says Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League have benched Reg Fleming and Tom Williams.

Hockey writer Paul Rimstead also quotes several unidentified players as saying they are dissatisfied with the treatment they are getting from Hap Emms in his first season as general manager of the Bruins.

Williams, the third - highest scorer on the team with nine goals, was reluctant to discuss the problem but admitted he wasn't happy at not playing regularly and couldn't understand why he was benched.

The story said Williams and Fleming were sent back to their hotel in Detroit recently where the Bruins are working out, by coach Milt Schmidt who claimed they had been loafing on the ice.

Team-mates were quoted as saying Williams, born in Duluth, Minn., was benched because Emms did not like his style.

"I heard that he was benched Sunday night in Chicago on Hap's orders," one player was quoted. "They want him to be more aggressive, but Tommy's game is scoring goals and we need goals considering we have only one win and one tie in our last 16 games."

The Bruins are last in the six-team league.

"When you've quit school to give everything to a career in professional hockey, it worries you," Williams said. "But I know I can play in this league."

Williams was replaced Sunday night by Gary Dornhoefer, a native of Kitchener recently called up from the minors.

"That's one of the problems around here," another player was quoted as saying. "Dornhoefer played for Hap's junior team at Niagara Falls. You'd be surprised at how much partiality is being shown former Niagara Falls players. Wayne Rivers has been playing well in the minors but he came to us from the Detroit organization. So Dornhoefer, who was sitting on the bench down there, got called up."

The story quoted another player as saying that Emms hasn't called goaltender Eddie Johnston by name since he returned to the team after a brief stay in the minors and "he's on Al Langlois' back, too."

Prospector Bert Likes California

VANCOUVER—Like all the fellas who struck it rich in the goldfields, Bert Olmstead's eyes light up when California is mentioned.

Olmstead, coach of Vancouver Canucks, hasn't gotten around to panning for gold. He's accumulating riches in another manner.

Canucks are reaping a mighty harvest of Western Hockey League points at the expense of California teams. They toppled Los Angeles Blades 5-2 Tuesday night to boost their record against the Californians to 9-0.

Vancouver now has taken five straight from the Blades and has a 4-0 record against San Francisco Seals.

OFF THE HOOK

Canucks showed their confidence long before Tuesday's game. General manager Max McNab announced Monday that Vancouver fans attending Tuesday's games will be given free tickets if Canucks were beaten.

"Considering the weather," said Max, "the fans deserve a free game if we can't repay their loyalty with a win."

The tickets would have entitled the fans to admission to a Jan. 25 game against San Francisco, and Vancouver's offer didn't sit too well with Seals' general manager Bud Poile.

"That's a gross insult," fumed Poile. "We've got a good hockey club and nobody should give away tickets to see us play."

'WAIT UNTIL PLAYOFFS'

"Max can have his fun. Things are going to change, and let's wait until the playoffs to see who's going to have the last laugh."

Some 2,573 fans stepped out Tuesday to take up McNab's offer. But the Canucks, uncorking a pinpoint passing attack, took their manager off the hook.

They did it despite some sensational goaltending on the part of Blades' Marcel Pelletier. Marcel blocked 41 shots and missed only on shots by Jack Evans, Ray Brunel, Larry Popein, Ron Hutchinson and Howie Hughes, his 21st of the season.

Willie O'Ree and Jerry Toppazzini scored for the Blades.

BAKER BAGS BOOTY

LONDON (UPI) — A London baker celebrated the New Year four days late Tuesday by winning $770,000 on a soccer pool.

A spokesman for Littlewoods Pools' Company confirmed that Frank Wall, 62, was the only winner after exhaustive checks failed to reveal another punter with the maximum 24 points from Football (soccer) League matches played Jan. 1.

Wall staked 33 cents to pick up his tax-free jackpot, but his win is not a record for the treble chance pool. Last March Geoffrey Liddiard received a check for $876,258.

Wall, a grandfather, and his wife were taken to a secret hideout when it became obvious a big win was in the offing. They then were brought into town Tuesday to receive the winning cheque.

Millions of Britons play the soccer pools each week in the hope of pulling off a big win, most for what is called the treble chance.

To win the treble chance a bettor must correctly forecast eight ties from an average of 54 games. Most use a permutation which allows 16 picks in the hope the ties will drop into one line for a maximum of 24 points. Three points are awarded for a tie, two for an away win and one and one half for a home win.

A selection of eight ties, doesn't mean the jackpot — many bettors may have hit the same number the same week and a lesser prize is paid.

Smaller "dividends" are also paid for a lesser number of ties or other selections, according to the plan of betting used.

T-Birds Fall To Portland

PORTLAND (AP)—University of Portland completed a two-game sweep over University of B.C. Thunderbirds Tuesday night with a 60-50 basketball victory.

Portland jumped to a 41-25 halftime lead and the Thunderbirds never came closer than the final 10-point spread.

Paul Golden paced the pilots with 17 points. John Olsen scored 19 for UBC.

Pilots defeated UBC 96-90 Monday night in a game at Vancouver, Wash.

Cooke's Lakers Homeless Soon

LOS ANGELES (AP)—Jack Kent Cooke, Los Angeles Laker owner, has about 24 hours "to fish or cut bait," says a county supervisor, or his basketball team may be without a home court Jan. 15.

The Lakers have been using a 15,100-seat arena under a contract Cooke took over last summer when he purchased the National Basketball Association team for $5,000,000-plus.

The contract has two years to run, if the former owner of Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League agrees to pay the rent.

He actually has until Jan. 15 to accept the existing contract with the County Coliseum Commission.

But the commission is holding its monthly meeting tonight to consider Cooke's suggestion that the old contract be scrapped and a new one for 10 years be drawn up.

Cooke would like a contract making it possible to use the building for conventions and exhibitions. But Bill Nicholas, general-manager of the arena, says "the commission is not about to give it (permission) to him."

Milan's Lead Threatened By Buckaroo

For two weeks there hasn't been a cloud on Milan Marcetta's horizon. He's pounded along in the Western Hockey League individual scoring race, picking up goals and assists here and there, to lead comfortably. Now there's a Schmautz fogging up the view.

Marcetta still has the penthouse with 45 points (20 goals, 25 assists) but Portland's (Cliff) Schmautz has been bagging points with gusto, elan and uncommon frequency.

Schmautz plunked five goals and three assists last week to move into second place, only two digits behind Marcetta.

Schmautz' surge enabled him to slip past Vancouver's Billy McNeill.

In the penalty department there is no confusion about leadership.

Los Angeles' Howie Young has 108 minutes in 26 games which leaves him unabashedly the most bashing and sinful player in the league.

NO CENTRES

Habs Resemble Pile of Donuts

By The Canadian Press

Going into tonight's battle for top spot in the National Hockey League, Montreal Canadiens are showing a remarkable resemblance to donuts—they lack centres.

The Habs are entering the game one point behind their opponents, the Chicago Black Hawks, and Montreal coach Toe Blake's problem is how to fill that gap in the pivot position.

Ralph Backstrom is definitely out with a knee injury, Jean Beliveau remains an uncertain starter due to a pulled groin muscle and Gordon (Red) Berenson, who has filled in at centre spot before, is only partly recovered from a knee gash.

Canadiens, who have a game in hand over Chicago, are weak in other spots too. Winger Jean-Guy Talbot has a swollen shooting hand and goalie Gump Worsley is still nursing a sore knee.

The Hawks have a more cheerful story to tell. Their big gun, Bobby Hull, is in fine fettle and sitting pretty atop the pile of individual scorers with a league-leading 29 goals and 20 assists in only 27 games.

HAY IS OUT

Hawks' Bifl Hay sounds the only gloomy note in the lineup as he had to stay home for treatment of shoulder and foot injuries. Rookie Ken Hodge likely will fill in at left wing.

The battle between the two giants is the only NHL game scheduled for tonight.

Everyone but Backstrom, who suffered torn knee ligaments at New York Sunday, turned out for the Habs' 75-minute practice session Tuesday but several players showed their injuries were still tender. Black Hawk coach Billy Reay gave his boys a rest.

Beliveau, who missed Sunday's game due to a groin muscle pulled in practice last Saturday, skated about 15 minutes longer than his teammates Tuesday.

"I still feel it when I start to move and wind up a step slower than my linemates," he said. "I hope to play but won't know until I skate again in the morning.

Berenson, who has filled in for both Beliveau and Backstrom at centre, has been skating for only a few days since suffering a knee gash from his daughter's skate.

Despite Chicago's smaller number of injuries and the fact that they have won their last three starts—Canadiens have a 2-1 record—Reay was inclined to be cautious Tuesday in making predictions.

"I'll know just how well we're playing after we meet the Canadiens. We lost four of the five games (against Canadiens) and they should thank us for putting them where they are."

'WE CALL THEM' . . . . . 'YOU DON'T'

We Ignore Rules, Says Swede

TORONTO (CP)—Arne Stromberg, coach of the Swedish national hockey team, said Tuesday Canadian referees ignore the rules.

"There's not much difference in the rule books," Stromberg said. "Elbowing, boarding, spearing, charging are all defined the same. Over here they just don't call them."

"We like body-checking," he said. "We don't like interference and charging along the boards."

Told the Russians are becoming adept at North American tactics, Stromberg said: "Ya They learned it over here."

The young Swedish team arrived here Tuesday to play its final game of a North American tour in which it has won two, lost four and tied one.

The Swedes tonight play Toronto Marlboros, augmented by several players from other teams in the Ontario Junior Hockey League.

Two of the Swedes, Tord Lundstom and Haken Nygren, have been placed on the negotiation list of Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League.

Although the Russians are talking of turning professional to encounter tougher opposition, Stromberg doubted that the Swedes would follow suit.

"Except for boxing, there's no interest in professional sport in Sweden," Stromberg said. "People are educated that way over there."

HOWE'S HOCKEY

By GORDIE HOWE

Out of every hundred letters I receive in the mail, maybe one or two of them will be from a crank.

I used to keep them to myself. I never used to take them home because I figure hockey should be kept at the rink and a matter between hockey players.

Take it home and if things are going bad, it might put you in a bad mood and you'd be mean to the children. My wife, Colleen, has enough problems running the household without annoying her with a crank letter.

★ ★ ★

For a long time, when I used to get a bad letter, I'd keep it to myself. Then it started getting comical.

You don't take them so seriously after awhile. So I take some of them home now and Colleen, my No. 1 hockey fan, gets as much a kick out of them as I do.

Some of them are fantastic, they're so ridiculous. I'm not alone. Sid Abel, the Red Wing manager, gets more than anyone. The writers suggest line changes and diagram plays, want to know why he plays certain individuals.

★ ★ ★

Every now and then, someone wants to know why it is that Doug Mohns and Red Kelly had to wait until they were traded "before they found their right positions."

Anyone who really follows the game closely knows this is not true. Jack Adams, Jim Skinner and Sid Abel did play Kelly up front on occasion. However, when he was with Detroit we had a lot of forwards, needed defencemen.

Kelly was an All-Star defenceman eight of his 12 years with Detroit. How much more valuable can you be? Toronto had good defencemen, so they shoved him up front.

In his 11 seasons with Boston, Mohns played as a forward often, but more on defence. So it isn't strange to see him used regularly as a forward now at Chicago.

Seattle Seeks One Citizen With 4¼ Million

SEATTLE (AP)—Gov. Dan Evans of Washington Tuesday proposed a co-operative county-city program as one of the steps in building a stadium for a professional football team in Seattle.

Before any thought can be given to the stadium, however, the governor said a Seattle area citizen should be found who is willing to invest nearly $4,250,000 in a National Football League franchise.

Evans told a press conference that the franchise would cost $8,500,000, and one individual must own 51 per cent.

"Unless such an individual is found and a group is put together to invest the remainder of the franchise fee and working capital, consideration of alternative proposals become academic," Evans said.

If such an angel can be found, and if the county and city will join in a co-operative effort to build a stadium as a permanent home for the team, Evans said the time will then be ripe to ask the University of Washington board of regents for possible temporary use of the University Stadium.

Evans said an act he signed into law March 20 authorizes cities and countries to join in a co-operative plan for a sports stadium.

LONDON (AP) — Valery Brumel, world champion high jumper, has re-entered a hospital for treatment of leg injuries suffered in a motorcycle accident last year. A Moscow radio broadcast said Brumel's doctors have ruled out training for at least a year.

City Swim Aces Chosen for Team

Vito Dunford of Victoria's Flying Y Swim Club and Jim Gollmer of Victoria Olympians have been named to the Canadian team to compete against the U.S. in the 13th annual invitational age group dual swim meet Jan. 22 in London, Ont.

The Victoria boys will be the first representatives of British Columbia swimmers in the history of the meet.

Dunford and Gollmer were selected for the team after time trials taken all over Canada.

Gollmer will swim in the 100-yard breaststroke event and 200-yard medley relay in the 11-12 age group and Dunford will compete in the same events in the 13-14 class.

They will also be entered in a follow-up meet Jan. 23 in Toronto.

The 62-member Canadian team, to meet with the Americans in the University of Western Ontario pool, includes 10 swimmers who represented Canada in the 1964 Olympics and 17 of the 20 who were on Canada's 1965 team that competed in the British national championships.

Canada has been beaten 10 out of 12 times in the meet.

Tag-Team Kings Stay on Throne

Paddy Barrett and Tim Geohagen successfully defended their Canadian tag team title in a professional wrestling card Tuesday at Memorial Arena.

They won the best-of-three falls match when the opposing duo of Wild Bill Dromo and Okiyama was disqualified in the third round.

In other matches, Don Leo Jonathon defeated Pancho Lopez, Ricky Hunter put down Ivan Kameroff, while Sandor Kovacs and Bad Boy Shields wrestled to a draw.

Soren Maatta scored twice for the Swedish team while Sven Bystrom and Leif Anderson fired singles.

The fast - skating Canadian team dominated the game after Sweden put on a fine display in the first period before 9,000 fans.

Packers' Taylor Miffed by Miss

NEW YORK (AP)—Jim Taylor, who helped Green Bay Packers to victory over Cleveland Browns in Sunday's National Football League final, is miffed at being omitted from the Pro Bowl game roster.

"I feel I should have made it," the Packers fullback said Tuesday. "It's the first time in six years that I wasn't picked.

The 1965 season was Taylor's eighth in the NFL. Rookie Ken Willard of San Francisco and Bill Brown of Minnesota were the fullbacks chosen for the Western Conference all-stars.

Taylor was named the most valuable player in the NFL final, won by the Packers 23-12.

TORONTO (CP)—Bill Simpson of Toronto, president of the Canadian Soccer Football Association, said Tuesday night he knew nothing of Tottenham Hotspur and Glasgow Celtic playing exhibition games in Toronto and Vancouver this summer.

In New York, Julius G. Alonso, secretary-treasurer of the American Soccer League, a professional circuit in the eastern United States, had announced the two British teams will play each other in an exhibition series in North America.

Tottenham, third in the First Division of the English League, and Celtic, leading the First Division of the Scottish League, are scheduled to meet in New York May 22.

"This is a complete surprise to me," said Simpson, adding that he was elated at the news.

They will also play in Boston, Hartford, Conn., Philadelphia, Jersey City, St. Louis, Chicago, Los Angeles and San Francisco.

Betting Play Hits 4½ Billion Dollars

NEW YORK (AP)—Wagering on horse racing in the United States soared to nearly $4,500,000,000 in 1965 as 59,272,489 fans kept the turnstiles clicking.

With $3,129,722,482 bet on thoroughbreds and $1,334,759,973 on the harness races, a survey by the Associated Press last week showed the sport paid $355,206,380 into state treasuries.

In 1964 the states' share of the pari-mutuel handle was $350,095,928 from a total of $4,401,569,347 reported.

Attendance at the running tracks was up from 37,838,210 to 38,865,689. There was a slight decline in attendance at harness tracks with the unofficial figures showing a drop from 20,434,604 to 20,406,800.

FUJI MICRO SAFETY AND

EMERGENCY MEDICAL SUPPLIES

Nanaimo to Get Instant Hospital

NANAIMO — The Hub City will become the second "outpost" on Vancouver Island for the storage of emergency medical supplies.

Provincial civil defence officials Tuesday confirmed that the federal government plans to store the supplies in a former army ammunition dump on the outskirts of Harewood.

A few of the buildings, constructed during the Second World War, are being used as a general storage depot for the Nanaimo army camp.

The supplies, which would be used only in a major disaster, will be under control of provincial civil defence officials.

Another federal government emergency depot is at Jordan River on the west coast of the Island.

Stored there in 50 crates is all the material needed to set up a 200-bed hospital which includes three operating rooms, a pharmacy and an X-ray room.

4,200 Return To Classrooms

DUNCAN — Some 4,200 students went back to school in the Cowichan school district today after a one-day break on Tuesday.

But at Ladysmith and Lake Cowichan the schools have not reopened since the Christmas holidays.

Ladysmith board secretary R. W. Ovenden said "for safety reasons we are keeping the schools closed.

"Some 1,970 students are home. There is ice under the snow on the steep hills the school buses have to negotiate, and no highway sidewalks for the youngsters to walk on."

The story is the same at Lake Cowichan, where 1,600 students are involved.

FEW FAILURES

Power failures are few as the storm continues.

But again suffering are the residents on the west arm of Shawnigan Lake and along the Port Renfrew Road.

A Victoria crew was dispatched to the area this morning to help in repair work.

B.C. Hydro also reported trouble at Honeymoon Bay and Caycuse.

B.C. Telephone Company spokesman Jim Hawthornthwaite said "Our troubles are only a little bit more than normal.

"Only about 35 subscribers are without service."

NEW MEDICAL HEALTH officer at RCAF Station, Comox, is Sqdn.-Ldr. Roy M. Stewart, former medical officer in charge of the health unit at the National Defence Centre in Ottawa. He joined the RCAF in 1963 after taking his medical training and graduating from Guy's Hospital in London. He was born in England and served with the British Army during the Second World War in France, Germany and the Middle East.

25 PIGS PERISH

MILL BAY—Twenty-five pigs, many of them newly-born, died at the Craven Farm here as a result of a bad-weather power failure last week, said farm officials.

A farm spokesman said several factors contributed to the deaths, including lack of warmth for the new-born and severe overcrowding at the water outlets during time when power was on and water being pumped.

Two of the pigs lost were market size, several weighed about 100 pounds and the rest were newly-born.

Wins Lake's Lighting Contest

LAKE COWICHAN — The Kiwanis - sponsored Christmas lighting contest was won by Mr. and Mrs. Roy Schultz.

The over-all prize was presented for the decoration of their MacDonald Street home.

The Schultz family won the over-all award for the lake district.

Basic Services Come First Says New Reeve

Establishment of basic services is the most important task facing the first elected North Saanich council, Reeve James Cumming said Monday.

"Our initial effort must be based on setting our house in order," the reeve said.

"Speed laws, procedural by-laws, animal control, nusiance bylaws, licenceing and many other matters will have to be processed by council."

Roads are the only present public works concern in North Saanich, he said.

Provincial highways department has undertaken to maintain all roads in the municipality for the first three months of 1966.

After that the municipality will likely continue the arrangement until equipment is purchased.

The fire and ambulance service will continue with North Saanich and Sidney sharing the cost.

Reeve Cumming noted the fire committee is considering the establishment of a branch firehall in Deep Cove area.

Council members sworn in Monday were Mrs. Nell Horth, Trevor Davis, J. Harold Wilson, John S. Clark, Douglas R. Cook and George Aylard, and the reeve.

Sewer Plans Run Ahead Of Schedule

NORTH COWICHAN — Plans for a $500,000 sewer system to service the Mary Street - Gibbins Road area are ahead of schedule.

Reeve Donald Morton said Monday the engineer's plans are three weeks ahead of schedule.

A bylaw is expected to be put to ratepayers in early spring.

Reeve Morton revealed the plan now includes the James Street area which had previously been expected to try and link to the city of Duncan system.

Funeral on Thursday For Ex-Duncan Mayor

DUNCAN — Edward Walter Lee, a former Duncan mayor and alderman, died suddenly at his home Monday. He was 83.

Funeral services will be Thursday afternoon at 2 p.m. from Duncan United Church with Rev. Bernard Knipe officiating.

Interment will be at Mountain View Cemetery.

Mr. Lee was a retired builder.

He came to Canada from England in 1908 and started his own contracting business in 1918, continuing until his retirement in 1948.

He was a city alderman for 14 years and mayor 1939-1941.

Mrs. Lee was on the board of directors of King's Daughters' Hospital for 20 years.

He was a past exalted ruler of Duncan Elk's Lodge 69 and a past president of Duncan Rotary.

Mr. Lee was a member and former officer of Duncan United Church.

GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Lee celebrated their golden wedding in November, 1961.

Besides the widow, Mr. Lee is survived by two sons, Edward and Horace, both in Duncan; four grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

At the city council meeting Monday a minute's silence was observed in memory of Mr. Lee.

Snow Bank Nabs Impaired Driver

SHAWNIGAN LAKE — When complaints were received Sunday about an erratic highway driver, RCMP set up a roadblock.

But Charles Francis Sampson, Brentwood Bay, never made it to the roadblock.

He got caught in a snow bank.

When police found him, Sampson was charged with impaired driving.

In court Monday he pleaded guilty and was fined $300. His driver's licence was endorsed.

LOGGING EQUIPMENT display at the Truck Loggers' Association convention in Vancouver next week will be twice the size of the display last year which is shown here in the photograph. A mobile spar tree similar to the one shown here will form part of a $2,000,000 heavy equipment display which will be on the grounds of the Bayshore Inn.

OUTDOOR SHOWROOM AT CONVENTION

Biggest and Best for Loggers

The greatest display of logging equipment ever assembled in Canada will be in store for delegates attending the 23rd annual Truck Loggers' Association convention Jan. 12-14 at the Bayshore Inn, Vancouver.

Loaders, tractors, trucks, shovels, tow boats, house trailers, power saws and work clothing will receive the careful scrutiny of the men they were designed to serve.

Everything in the show will be the newest, most sophisticated model of its kind, representing the latest answers to the needs of the logging industry.

★ ★ ★

Inside displays will be about the same as last year, but outside exhibits will require over twice the area occupied in 1965.

Every square foot of available space around the Bayshore is being pressed into service. Even the hotel swimming pool has again been expropriated for a special display.

All told, the show, comprising some 33 pieces of heavy equipment and 40 inside booths, will cover a total area of 50,000 square feet.

★ ★ ★

Overall value of the spread will run close to $2,000,000.

Display committee chairman Peter Bingham says interest in the equipment show has run higher than in any previous year.

He notes that there are some types of equipment being shown this year that most people will likely be seeing for the first time.

★ ★ ★

A number of new items will be shown that were designed specifically to meet the needs that have emerged in smallwood logging.

Mr. Bingham says that around 20 per cent of this year's show will feature equipment more or less related to smallwood logging use.

Arthur Mayse

Among the people I pass the time of day with are several fairly recent immigrants from less-favored provinces on the wrong side of the Rockies. A mere couple of weeks ago, any mention of our Victoria climate to these fetched an automatic response:

"Sure, it's nice to get away from those Eastern winters. But we do get homesick for at least a little snow . . . it's so bracing."

Well, the snow has come, we've all had the heck braced out of us, and the prairie gophers are hoping even more fervently than we long-term Victorianos that the stuff will turn into honest West Coast rain.

As I sit here in wet shoes twittering out these lines, a return to normal seems imminent. Naturally, I refer to Victoria weather; over on the mainland, another slice of winter is cartwheeling north from Oregon to plaster luckless Vancouver.

That's what the prognosticators claim, but you can bet your snow tires that down in Oregon, they are blaming their weather on Canada as always!

★ ★ ★

Unlike certain lucky RCN units which are scampering toward Caribbean waters, we homebodies must remain on station to stand the dreariest watch of the year.

This extends through January and takes in nasty little February, a month for which I must extend myself to find a reasonable excuse.

It's usually a good time of year for steelhead fishermen, a super-hardy branch of the angler tribe whose joy it is to stand in cold water and colder air, casting for large, sullen trout with lines which frequently freeze in the rod rings.

Spring salmon are also waiting to be caught, this year in phenomenal numbers: but the sport is even chillier than steelheading. Unless he fishes from a pretty large boat, your salmon buff can't move around enough to circulate a glow. Also, a fire is denied him.

Even so, all around our perimeters, smallboat men slip out to play a cat-and-mouse game with the winter sea when and as they can.

In this contest, the sea is the cat, and it can flex its claws with cruel speed.

A good fisherman and boatman I know slipped his outboard rig in at Ten Mile during a late afternoon spell of relative calm. He had only an hour or so, and didn't really expect to hook anything.

He did though . . . a strong, wild winter spring, as the early twilight was settling.

Wind turned the water lumpy before his 24-pounder was in the boat. With the wind came whirling snow to blot the land from sight.

The fisherman ran in blind from Baynes Channel, pursued by cresting seas and with disaster threatening every foot of the way.

Luck and skill fetched him safe to Smuggler's Cove, but only just.

My own boat is hibernating under canvas on its trailer, and there it will sit till the happy day when our proper, mild Victoria winter returns.

My friend Freeman "Skipper" King has just trudged in from the sopping outdoors to shake the wet from his Cowichan sweater and report considerable blowdown in Francis Nature Park which he helped establish.

This bothers him not at all. He and the junior naturalists who work with him will clear the trails, but won't otherwise interfere with nature's cycle.

"We could use a little more sunlight in there, anyway," Skipper observes. "It will encourage new growth."

The Freeman F. King Scholarship Fund for Uvic students specializing in the natural sciences is still about $500 short of the $5,000 goal.

A one buck contribution from every man who scouted with Skipper as a boy—and gained lasting benefit therefrom—would double it.

Donations will be welcomed by fund custodian Dr. A. Chapman, care of the Provincial Museum.

West Wind to Blow Halt To Wintery Hullabaloo

By HUMPHRY DAVY

It's a wretched day but there may be some relief for Victorians plagued since Christmas with snow, sleet and ice.

And if normal weather does return soon, you can thank 100-year-old Jimmy Fraser, a famous Songhees Indian weather prophet, who through the years has made unofficial weather predictions.

An invalid at Postles Haven Rest Home, 976 Heywood, Jimmy agreed today to help bring an end to the inclement weather.

He summoned up his strange powers and consulted the west wind spirit mask of Ahoo-ya on ways to call a halt to the messy weather.

According to Jimmy the snow and sleet is caused by a family quarrel between the North Wind spirit and his wife, South Wind. They parted hundreds of years ago. She moved to California to take up permanent residence.

The North Wind, who is pretty huffy about the whole affair, moves south from time to time to have a word with his wife.

And when they meet, you can imagine as Jimmy puts it, "what a hullabaloo there is in the heavens" . . . snow, sleet and ice are thrown about.

So it was decided, after Jimmy consulted the spirit, that Ahoo-ya will blow the two winds apart—the north to his northern abode, and the south back to California.

The west wind will occupy the empty place. And what will that mean? Rain, and more rain . . . no more snow.

Solely in Interest Of Journalistic Honesty . . .

By PETE LOUDON

Warning: Anyone transmitting the following information to friends in the east may be subject to prosecution by the Victoria Visitors' Bureau.

But just between us true-blue Victorians there was no need to wear sun glasses last month.

If you spent eight hours a night in bed during December you must have been awake for 497 hours. And in all that time there was only 75.8 hours of bright sunshine, report the palefaces at Victoria City Weather Office.

The monthly bulletin, sent out in a plain wrapper with a bottle of cod liver oil, boasts that this sunny pittance was 10 hours more than our normal allotment.

Other soggy statistics:

We had 22 days with measurable precipitation (two days more than normal), 3.69 inches of rain and 14.5 inches of snow, which obviously was intended for Vancouver because this was 12.5 inches more than normal for the month. The weatherman slyly boiled that down to 4.9 inches of "precipitation." But we know the truth, don't we?

●

The ogres of Gonzales Hill also stated that the mean temperature (a fitting word) was 41.1 degrees—sort of a midway mark between our low of 29.5 degrees and our high of 55 degrees. If you were lying on the lawn, the grass minimum was 28 degrees.

The weather summary for the year also makes Arizona seem far away.

We had 25.45 inches of precipitation in 1965, 1.9 inches less than normal, far more than the record low of 16.01 set in 1952 and far less than the record high of 39.36 set in 1887—which must have been the year the ducks moved into Beacon Hill Park.

Our 1965 snows totalled 24.9 inches, 13.3 inches more than normal, but hardly anything compared to 1916 when 78.2 inches set a record. In 1881, 1889 and 1941 we had no measureable snow, the weathermen point out.

(Also plugged into the report, like sugar in the castor oil, is the fact that we had no precipitation at all in Victoria for three months of our recorded history—July 1958, August 1901 and July 1888).

But last year we had measureable dampness during 136 days. During the year's 5,840 waking hours we had 2,262.4 hours of bright sunshine, most tans coming from bottles or sun lamps. Record highest was 2,545.3 set in 1951 and record lowest, 1,947.7 set in 1914.

Sunniest month was July — 358.5 hours, which was 27.8 hours more than normal. Least sunny was January with 49 hours, 21 hours less than usual.

Lowest temperature for the year was 29.5, Dec. 31. Highest was 90 degrees on July 31. Record highest for Victoria was 95.2 set in 1941; record lowest 6.5 degrees, set in 1950.

Except for the snow, it was probably an average year for Victoria. The report just catches us at a bad time. Issued in July and read in bright sunlight, we'd probably be bragging about it.

Jilted Youth Admits Choking, Kicking Attack

A bearded, 19-year-old Lake Cowichan youth who choked his ex-girl friend's boy friend, was remanded in custody until Jan. 13 when he appeared in central court this morning.

Thomas B. Tuck pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm and wilful damage. He was previously convicted of common assault in Lake Cowichan, court was told.

Detective Norman Baker said Tuck went to the girl's home late on the night of Dec. 21. He grabbed his victim by the tie and choked him into unconsciousness. Tuck then kicked the youth in the face and body.

Det. Baker said Tuck then threw stones at the youth's car, jumped on the trunk and roof and did $74 damage to the vehicle.

Sudbury Hits Heavy-Going On Home Stretch

The Victoria-based tug Sudbury II was plowing through heavy weather today on the final stretch of a 5,000-mile round trip.

The deep-sea tug is expected to arrive in Victoria Friday with the crippled Formosan freighter, Tainan, in tow.

Contract for surveying damage to the 10,000-ton freighter has been awarded Yarrows Ltd. The ship's tailshaft broke near the Aleutian Islands the week before Christmas.

After a two-week dash, Sudbury took over towing of the ship from a U.S. navy tug.

Clear weather speeded up the home run until today when she ran into rough weather 500 miles west of Victoria.

Up-Island Staggers Amid Fresh Snowfall

Several Areas Cut Off Again

Heavy snowfalls north of the Malahat today virtually cut Vancouver Island in two.

Between three and six inches were dumped on most areas this morning.

And it was still coming down at press time.

Several areas were cut off as work crews struggled to keep pace with clogged highways.

Port Hardy on the Island's northeast tip and Tofino on the west coast are unreachable except by heavy truck.

Even the major cities are having trouble keeping roads clear.

"It's never-ending," said a highways official. "As quick as we clear the roads they get covered with another coat of snow."

The Malahat was hit first thing today by a three-inch snowfall. Snowplows and sanders cleared a path through.

But it is impassable without good snow tires or chains.

Cowichan Lake School closed its doors for the second day running while classrooms the length of the Island were noticeably empty.

Rural Saanich schools opened this morning but students were sent home at the lunch hour because of transportation difficulties on the northern end of the peninsula.

Blizzards added to the hazard north of Campbell River.

10-FOOT DRIFTS

At Port Hardy drifts up to 10-feet deep were reported.

Victoria lived up to its "banana belt" reputation.

Rain began falling this morning and the weatherman forecast more of the same for the next few days.

Temperatures will vary between 35 and 42—almost 10 degrees higher than the northern Island and Vancouver.

The forecast isn't so promising for other areas.

"GOOD DEAL MORE"

Weatherman William Mackie predicted a "good deal more snow" for the Island's east coast.

On the bright side, temperatures will rise to 32 overnight, 38 during the day in most regions as the Arctic front which caused the trouble is slowly rushed back.

Even before this morning's fall, Nanaimo airport reported 27 inches on the ground.

It was little better at Port Alberni with 21 inches and Comox with 16.

Despite the sudden weight of snow, hydro and telephone officials reported all well.

There are still some scattered calls to be answered in the Nanaimo area but no major breaks occurred.

Roads became treacherous in Victoria Tuesday night as a light snowfall froze over.

However, there were no major accidents and few minor ones.

The picture was the same Up-Island as many people were forced to leave their cars blocked in driveways and side streets.

Police advised snowtires and chains everywhere.

All roads north and west of Nanaimo have a covering of snow up to five inches in places.

The Tofino Road was buried under 12 inches first thing and was getting deeper every hour.

$100,000 IN OVERTIME

Meanwhile, B.C. Telephone Co. began to take stock of repair costs to date.

A company spokesman said $100,000 will be paid out in overtime alone to crews who worked non-stop through Christmas week.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said it will not be known for some time what the cost has been to them.

TOPICS of the DAY

A Prospective Foster Parents' meeting will be held Thursday, Jan. 13, at 8 p.m., and not Jan. 6 as previously announced.

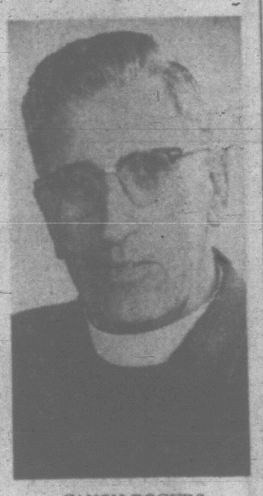
A suspended sentence was imposed today on William Fagan, 2828 Rita Road, who earlier pleaded guilty to common assault. Magistrate William Ostler placed him on $250 bond for six months.

Fagan was charged after assaulting his sister. The magistrate told him that "idleness combined with liquor causes this sort of thing."

A man pleaded guilty to contributing to juvenile delinquency was remanded today for pre-sentence and psychiatric report.

Ronald Starkey, 3933 Saanich Road, will be sentenced for the offence Jan. 13. The charge involved a 12-year-old girl.

St. Matthias Induction Sunday Night



CANON ROGERS
. . . leaves Royal Oak

Canon Jack Rogers will be inducted Sunday at 7:30 p.m. as rector of St. Matthias Anglican Church, 600 Richmond Road.

The induction service will be conducted by Archbishop Harold Sexton, Anglican primate of British Columbia.

Canon Rogers has been rector of St. Michael and All Angels Church, Royal Oak, for the past nine years. He is a graduate of St. John's College, Winnipeg, and was ordained in 1933.

He succeeds Rev. Angus Cameron of Lundavra who has been appointed Anglican chaplain at St. Joseph's Hospital and Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh, rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Quamichan, will be the new rector of St. Michael's and All Angels, Royal Oak.

Phone 'Joke' Means Jail For Party-goer

John Lamont, 876 Craigflower, was drinking at a house party on Harriet Road early on the morning of Dec. 12.

He decided "just as a joke" to call the telephone operator and tell her he was being held in the house against his will.

But Saanich police didn't appreciate the humor when they arrived on the scene after tracing the call. They charged him with misleading police.

And Magistrate William Ostler didn't think it was funny either when he heard the circumstances in central court this morning.

He said police cannot ignore such calls no matter how foolish they seem.

And he remanded Lamont in custody until Jan. 13 for a pre-sentence report.

MARGARET DAVY
. . . 'colorful, dramatic'

Girl's Work Chosen For Caravan

A dramatic water-color painting by a 13-year-old Victoria schoolgirl will be exhibited across Canada in 1967.

It is the work of Margaret Davy, a Grade VII student at Willows Elementary, and is the only entry from Greater Victoria public schools to be chosen for exhibit in a centennial caravan.

Margaret's painting, described as "colorful, dramatic and emotional," depicts the expulsion of the white settlers, the Acadians, from Nova Scotia in 1755.

It is one of 26 art works by British Columbia school children picked for inclusion in the cross-Canada exhibition.

They were chosen from 250 entries from B.C. schools by judges at the University of British Columbia and have now been forwarded to the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission in Ottawa for inclusion in the national art caravan.

Schools throughout B.C. were invited to submit five or six paintings or drawings by children in Grades 6, 7 and 8. They were given the choice of seven subjects depicting The Causes of Confederation.

Margaret is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphry Davy, 2762 Heron Street.

GALLERY STUDENT

Margaret who has been a student at Willows Elementary since 1958, celebrated her 13th birthday on New Year's Day. She became interested in painting after being taken by her parents to Greater Victoria Art Gallery at the age of seven.

Since then she has been a regular student at the art classes provided for school children at Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

10,000 IDLED BY SNOW

About 10,000 loggers are out of work in coastal British Columbia because of snow.

A spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said some of the camps were to reopen this week after the annual Christmas-New Year's shutdown for maintenance repairs, but the weather has cancelled this.

Fred Fieber, IWA regional secretary-treasurer, said of the 10,000 men involved, about 2,500 are on Vancouver Island. The snow has hit 200 loggers on the southern end of the island.

NO PAY

Until they return to work, loggers don't get paid but if they are eligible they can claim unemployment insurance.

Mr. Fieber said the last two winters have been unusual because of the heavy snow in the latter part of December.

Re-opening of the camps will depend on the weather and the altitude of the operation.

Some low-lying camps are often unaffected, but those at the 3,000 to 4,000 foot level often are closed until March.

On Vancouver Island, one company — Crown Zellerbach — postponed re-opening until next week. About 860 men are involved.

New Minister To Discuss Nematodes

Canada's new federal Agriculture Minister Joseph Greene will make a side-trip here Monday to discuss the golden nematode situation on Saanich Peninsula.

It will be part of a week-long western tour by Mr. Greene to look up provincial agriculture ministers and receive briefings on local problems such as the nematode infestation here, it was revealed today in Ottawa.

The tour starts Sunday when Mr. Greene flies from Ottawa to Penticton to meet B.C. Agriculture Minister Frank Richter in his hometown.

The two ministers also will see representatives of the fruit industry to discuss the recently-inaugurated joint program of rehabilitating grape and tree-fruit growers who were severely hit by a 1964 cold snap that caused millions of dollars damage to orchards.

Hospitals Handled 900 More Patients

The rush on acute hospital beds in Victoria last year saw almost 900 more patients accommodated than in the previous year.

But where Royal Jubilee Hospital had almost 1,000 more admissions, St. Joseph's had about 100 less.

The two hospitals combined cared for 30,634 patients during 1965 compared to 29,768 in 1964.

At Royal Jubilee, administrator George Masters said Jubilee admissions in 1965 were 16,788 compared to 15,826 — an actual increase of 962.

BIRTHS CONTROLLED

This 6 per cent increase came during a year when maternity cases were reduced — largely because of new birth control techniques, authorities believe.

The hospital had 1,794 new babies in 1964 but this total dropped to 1,661 last year — a drop of 133.

"We had no more beds than before, but we had a faster turnover," said Mr. Masters, who has been coping for months with a waiting list for elective surgery of several hundred. It is estimated 1,600 people are waiting for admissions to Royal Jubilee or St. Joseph's at present.

The bed shortage also contributed to development of a new policy of surgical operations for outpatients, last year at Royal Jubilee.

HOME TO RECOVER

Last year 1,000 outpatients came to Jubilee for stays as short as six hours for minor surgery, then were sent home to recuperate.

At St. Joseph's in 1965 there were 13,846 admissions compared to 13,942 in 1964. Maternity cases dropped from 1,450 in 1964 to 1,312. Occupancy of total hospital beds was 81 per cent.

The emergency department at St. Joseph's was busier last year than in the year previous by 1,418 cases. During the year there were 16,711 patients brought to emergency. But only 2,248 were required to remain in hospital after initial treatment.

During 1965 there were 617 people taken to emergency at St. Joseph's following traffic accidents — 29 less than in 1964. Last month 1,346 people were treated in emergency, 89 of whom were traffic victims.

DEAR ABBY . . .

She Was Roped In!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my neighbor asked if she could hang a few sheets on my clothesline. I said all right. Then she started hanging all sorts of colored garments, rugs, blankets, etc., on my line. She will not put up a clothesline in HER yard because she doesn't want it cluttered. Occasionally, I didn't mind, but now it has become an everyday occurrence. I don't want to take down my line because I need it for my own use. She's added two lines of her own to my pole so now she feels that she can use HER lines anytime. I am very much upset over this. It's caused many family arguments because my husband will not tell them it's annoying. We don't want hard feelings. Please tell me how to discourage this practice?

HAVE HAD IT

DEAR HAVE HAD IT: Remind your neighbor that she asked permission to hang a "few sheets" on your line, and you think she's gone a bit too far. Face it. You are really upset with yourself for lacking the backbone to set your neighbor straight. Don't blame your husband for refusing to run interference for you. That's not HIS line!

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I shouldn't complain because my fiance says he loves me a lot and I know he never looks at another girl, but here's my problem. Now that deer hunting season is here he says he'll see me after the season is over. He is so crazy about hunting, he goes every minute he has off from work. Abby, everyone says I'm a fool to wait for him to come to see me when he feels like it. I think if he really cared for me he'd see me on week-ends during the deer season, don't you? Should I tell him he can either find time for me or he can find someone else?

SECOND CHOICE

DEAR SECOND: If you're sure the only kind of deer your fiance is interested in is the four-legged kind, you're lucky. Don't challenge him to find another "dear" unless you want to go hunting for a new boy friend.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent article, you said the boy's mother should set up restrictions in the absence of the girl's mother doing so. We had the same situation a few years ago. Our son, at 17, was going steady with an 18-year-old girl. He, too, practically "lived" at her house. We tried everything we could think of to keep them from seeing so much of each other. We talked to our son. We limited the use of our car. But the girl used her mother's car, so that didn't work. In desperation I phoned the girl's mother and begged her not to let our son come over so much. I told her he had a lot of school left and would be in no position to marry for several years. All to no avail. The girl's mother said they were "good kids," she "trusted" them, and they were "in love."

Well, a few months after our son turned 18 he informed us that the girl was pregnant. Our son is now 20. His education is finished as he had to get a job at 18 to support a family. They have two children now and they are miserable. His wife is a sloppy housekeeper. The only time the floor gets scrubbed is when he does it. He has to take care of the babies when he gets home from work at night. She complains that there isn't enough money and they don't have a decent car, etc. I blame early dating, going steady, AND the girl's parents.

GRIEVING MOTHER.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Sports-Minded Ladies —These Are for You

By Penny Saver

Women with a flair for sports, either indoor or outdoor, need a type of ensemble that is comfortable, roomy, and one that will last. Thinking of the bowler in particular, tight-fitting pants can be very hazardous . . . embarrassing, to say the least! When engaged in any type of activity, comfortable clothing is of the essence, so that you can enjoy what you are doing.

When I look for a garment to wear as a sports outfit, I try to choose something that can serve more than just this purpose.

When I was browsing in one shop, I found the perfect skirt to suit my requirements. It is made of imported wool from Scotland, hand-woven in New Brunswick. Each skirt is gored, which means that it is made of cut pieces of material sewn together. About 30 such panels comprise each skirt. Because of this gored effect, the skirt never loses its pleats.

These range in price from $18 to $30. There is a large variety of colors to choose from. Some feature delicate metallic embroidery, which further enhances their attractiveness.

Sweaters are a boon to any girl's wardrobe. I found some lovely bulky-knits, selling for just $8.98. These feature that cosy turtle neck, which helps ward off the biting cold. They have long sleeves, but do not have a ribbed finish. This gives a very different look to the whole sweater. Colors include wine, black and blue.

Selling for $6.98 are shoulder-wraps, made of imported wool from Scotland. These are ideal for throwing over your shoulders as you dash madly to your neighbors for the morning coffee.

Top any winter outfit with a saucy little beret, with warm, woollen sidepieces that cover the ears and tie under the chin. These berets are made of laminated fabric, and come in shades of red, navy blue, and sky blue. They sell for $3.98.

TODAY'S RECIPE

ORANGE CINNAMON BUBBLE LOAF

Half cup milk, ¼ cup granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon orange rind, 1 envelope fast-rising active dry yeast, ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 egg, well-beaten, 2 tablespoons soft shortening, 3 cups (about) pre-sifted all-purpose flour, ⅓ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Scald milk; add sugar, salt and one tablespoon orange rind. Stir until dissolved. Cool to lukewarm.

Meanwhile, measure lukewarm water into bowl; stir in one teaspoon sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well.

Stir in lukewarm milk mixture, beaten egg, shortening and 2 cups of the flour. Add enough additional flour until dough begins to leave the sides of the bowl — about one cup more. Turn out dough and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl, grease top. Cover. Let rise 50 to 60 minutes in a warm place, free from draft.

Punch down dough, turn out on lightly-floured board, cover with a towel and let rest 10 minutes.

Meantime, combine the ⅓ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon orange rind, cinnamon and melted butter.

Divide dough in half. Shape each into a 15-inch roll. Cut into 15, 1-inch pieces. Roll in ball shape with fingers and line a greased 8½ x 4½-inch loaf pan with 10 balls. Sprinkle one-quarter of the cinnamon mixture over top. Cover centre with 5 remaining balls. Sprinkle with one-quarter of cinnamon mixture. Repeat with other half of dough.

Cover and let rise as before for about 45 minutes. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 30 to 35 minutes.

Now's the time to ban the bulge. A constructive way to protest against your bulges is to follow Josephine Lowman's Why Grow Old column in The Victoria Daily Times. Starting Jan. 10, Mrs. Lowman begins a special eight-week course designed to help you lose up to 20 pounds and improve your overall appearance. This special series begins Monday on the women's pages of this paper.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

During Middle Age Take Intelligent Look at Yourself

This week I am bringing you a few old thoughts for the New Year. I hope that some may amuse you and others give you food for thought.

Lowman

Someone once said, "Middle age is when you begin eating what is good for you instead of what you like." I thought they had done away with middle age and that only youth and older age remain. According to that definition, there are a lot of 30-year-olds who are middle-aged and many 60-year-olds who have not yet arrived at that point.

This reinforces the belief of the experts that it is ridiculous to measure age and physical condition and mental outlook by the number of years a person has lived. Individuals differ so greatly in these matters.

However, so-called middle age is a time when folks are apt to stop, look, listen and weigh their lives. It is a time when they may look back and wonder what happened to their plans, their dreams, their ambitions and happiness.

It is a time when that extra measure of youthful vigor may be limping a bit and the neglect of health and beauty care of past years begins catching up a bit. This is a time when physical weaknesses and the results of negative thinking may show up.

This midpoint is a good time to take stock. There is still time to apply corrective measures to the first signs of disease, to make the necessary changes in diet and in habits of life. Many of those who have lived to a great old age, found that they had some organic or systemic weakness and then nursed it along for the rest of their lives.

It is a fine time to decide whether or not your life is moving in the direction you wish. People of this age are still young enough to make changes in their attitudes and situations which will lead to greater satisfaction.

This really isn't a time when you must eat only what is good for you but you may find that some changes are in order and profit by them. Take advantage of what is known about the tremendous value of regular exercise, about the impact of good nutrition and have a positive, happy attitude on vibrant living.

Middle age is a time when we should take stock but in an intelligent way rather than an age-conscious way.

If you would like to have my leaflet "Pep," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

Industry for Handicapped People

TORONTO (CP) — A woman who founded and directs an industry aimed at helping homebound handicapped persons support themselves plans a trip to New York City this week as the first move in an effort to extend her operations to other countries.

Mrs. George C. Marshall of Toronto started Marina Creations in 1955 under the sponsorship of the Canadian Society for Crippled Civilians.

It sells articles made at home by handicapped persons. The enterprise supplies raw materials and patterns and uses volunteer workers to collect finished items.

Mrs. Marshall said Monday she will meet U.S. federal government and New York and Connecticut state representatives to discuss extending the industry into the U.S.

Marina Creations, which has annual sales in Canada of about $50,000, now has branches in Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., London, Ont., and Toronto. Mrs. Marshall said enquiries have been received from Montreal, Halifax and Winnipeg.

Travel from East

In Victoria to spend the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Orchard of East Saanich Road were their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas A. Alexander. During their week-long stay, the couple also visited the Beacon Street home of Mr. Alexander's parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Alexander. Members of both families gathered in the senior Alexanders' home for a family dinner and later in the week Mr. and Mrs. Orchard entertained at an "at home." There were 30 guests attending. The couple returned to their Kingston, Ont., home on Sunday afternoon.

Seattle Trip

Travelling to Seattle for the recent holiday were Mr. and Mrs. Peter Caleb of Victoria. Mrs. Caleb is residence director and don of Margaret Newton Hall, Gordon Head campus. They were the guests of Dr. and Mrs. L. G. Mousel.

Exchange Gifts

Following a buffet supper, gifts were exchanged when the Victoria Branch of the Gilbert and Sullivan Society held a holiday party in the clubrooms on Murray Drive. A sing-song and games rounded out the evening.

With the peak of party-giving and going past its peak, Victorians are enjoying the chance to get together at quiet luncheons and teas. Seen at the noon hour in the Empress Hotel, Tuesday, are Mr. Colin Graham, curator of the Greater Victoria Art Gallery, with his sister, Mrs. Angus Kenning, and his mother, Mrs. Colin Graham, here from Vancouver for a holiday visit.

Brains Outdo Brawn

GENEVA PARK, Ont. (CP) — In a world where a 98-pound weakling with a BA degree is a hero, survival of the fittest doesn't mean much, delegates to a conference on fitness for women were told recently.

The five-day YMCA-sponsored conference began Tuesday with an opening speech by Mrs. Robert McCormack of York University's sociology department, Toronto.

Mrs. McCormick said the key to 20th century living is "survival of the brainiest."

"To put this in the extreme, the physically fit school drop out is a liability to himself and others. The 98-pound weakling with a BA degree is an asset. He may be living on pills . . . but he is a hero to himself and others."

She told the more than 80 delegates that women were in danger of becoming little more than nagging mothers if they failed to revise their concept of fitness to a society based on brain technology.

B.C. REUNION IN HONOLULU

BARRIE, Ont. (CP)—Graduates of Vancouver's Templeton Junior High School signed a pact years ago to hold a reunion in 1940. The first was so successful they decided to meet again every five years. Mrs. Kay Rhoades lost touch with the group on moving to Ontario but recently attended the sixth reunion in Honolulu.

Expert Can Spot Delinquents Before They Reach Kindergarten

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — A noted criminologist says children who are likely to become juvenile delinquents can be singled out when only two or three years old.

Dr. Eleanor Tuoroff Glueck, a researcher at Harvard University, announced this conclusion after years of studying infant and family characteristics.

She said the findings offer new hope for preventive action in individual cases before serious delinquency actually develops.

Dr. Glueck and her husband, Sheldon, who is professor of criminal law at Harvard law school, devised the widely-used Glueck social prediction table based on a 1950 study of children in the 5½- to six-year-old range.

Dr. Glueck now has added two factors which she said make her table effective for weighing up the delinquency potential still earlier in life.

Two years ago the New York City youth board reported that a 10-year study using the original Glueck table showed that of 33 boys it identified as having a high delinquency potential at school-entering age, 25, or 75.7 per cent, became persistent offenders before the age of 17.

Of 243 boys identified as unlikely to become delinquent, only nine or 2.9 per cent, did so. Dr. Glueck believes the revised table will prove equally accurate in assessing younger children.

The original table was based on three factors. Two were social: 1: Undesirable parental traits such as criminality, alcoholism, emotional disturbance or mental retardation, and 2: The degree of parental affection for the child. One was constitutional: The degree of child restlessness.

ADD TWO FACTORS

The revised table adds two constitutional factors: Infant destructiveness and resistance to authority.

Dr. Glueck said that since the two parental factors are apparent from the time of the child's birth, she is hopeful that "identification of potential delinquents can eventually be pushed back beyond even the two to three-year level."

She placed the primary blame of delinquency on "the weakening American family.

"Mothers, rich or poor, who do not make appropriate provision for the physical and emotional care of their children are the culprits in today's ever-increasing crime rate," she said in an interview.

She said fathers, too, must assume more responsibility toward their children. She deplored what she described as the "view in our society that a father has fulfilled his role if he provides resources for the family."

Dr. Glueck said that while lack of family cohesion is the principal source of problem behavior, children with certain characteristics are more likely than others to respond to an adverse environment by becoming deliquent.

She said every child is entitled to a number of fundamental rights.

"He has a right to parents who love each other, who want him and love him, who are deeply concerned for his welfare, who will give him supervision so he will not be so completely left to his own resources that he will make serious mistakes," she said.

"He has a right to have limits set for his behavior so he may early in life develop the ability to discipline himself.

"He has a right to be in a family that is all for one, one for all."

Affluence Seen As Threat to Jews

TORONTO (CP) — An Israeli woman warned delegates to the national Hadassah Wizo conference Tuesday night that the "affluent society" may be the greatest danger ever faced by the Jewish people.

Raya Jaglom, chairman of the world Wizo executive, said affluence may be robbing Jews of the stubbornness that has kept them from being assimilated into non-Jewish cultures.

Mrs. Jaglom told 800 delegates that the Israelis' greatest worry arises from the apathy of Jews outside Israel who are in danger of assimilation.

Adding to the danger, she said, was the apparent lethargy of Jews to the growing signs of anti-Semitism in Europe and North and South America.

BE SMART—

Well, it's time for us to get out the old crystal ball and make a prediction for this year! We see the return of the important short cocktail dress . . . and look for a second-go-round for the "bubble," one of the loveliest fashions ever created.

A WOMAN'S VIEWPOINT

By Pat Dufour

This evening, there's a sad flicker in the lights that warm the contours of our family Christmas tree. It's almost as if they knew that their yearly reign is almost over and tomorrow they'll be packed away in their boxes until next year.

It's many years since I left my native Devon, yet, like my superstitious Celtic forebears, I'll not tempt fate by leaving my tree up after Twelfth Night. I can remember as a child the awesome threat of bad luck if the tree wasn't down that date, or Little Christmas as we preferred to call it.

Tomorrow being Twelfth Night, the tree shines back at us tonight with a special brilliance, as if to stall the moment when, shorn of splendor, it will be laid to rest on a funeral pyre in our backyard. And, as we sit and warm ourselves at its radiance, it's as if I were back in the days when Twelfth Night meant the time for one of the merriest parties of the party season.

Customs die hard, and in England their resilience is almost indestructible. Even in these days of space travel and world tension, Englishmen are reluctant to forego the Little Christmas festivities that began as far back as the fourth century.

Tomorrow Is the Big Day

Even Shakespeare fell victim to the giddy gaiety that seems to infect most of his countrymen on Jan. 6. His play, named after the festival, was in honor of one of the biggest holidays of the year.

In his day, the date that marked the Three Wise Men's first sight of the Christ Child, heralded a day of wild celebration. Today, Englishmen restrict their celebrating to family parties and attendance at special church services.

When I was small, the parties seemed imbued with almost the same amount of magic as THE day. All day long, the tantalizing aromas of roast goose would make almost impossible our parents' command to "Eat lightly, so as not to spoil your appetite for dinner." As we grew older, the sizzle of the fire iron as it made its traditional plunge into the mulled ale being warmed at the drawing room fireplace was enough to have us "panting at the bit" in our impatience to reach the legal age for sampling!

Everyone Became a Star

And, with what precocious confidence did we comply with the adults' request to perform, either with a poem of our own making, a timely song or the latest step, painfully learned at our weekly dancing lesson!

If the entertainment lacked sophistication, no one seemed to notice as the women sipped on ruby red port and their menfolk took their choice of ale or cider. The refreshments may have lacked the polish of a modern-day cocktail party but seemed to endow the company with a humor and warmth that lacked nothing in spontaneity!

When I came to Canada, I found that many French-Canadians share the English love of Little Christmas. To many unable to get home for Christmas or New Year, it's almost as wonderful to be able to plan to be there for "Les Roix." With the realistic streak that seems to run through the veins of many of our French-speaking counterparts, they also see it as the last chance to make sure they begin a new year with no commitments left unmet.

As one friend told me, "If we've forgotten to give someone a gift at Christmas or New Year, we can save our neck at Twelfth Night!"

The Scene Is Completed

In many eastern Canadian homes, just as here, the Nativity Scene figures prominently in holiday decorations. But, with logic, many do not place the Three Wise Men in position until Jan. 6, the day marking the Magi's arrival at the manger. As the tiny figures are placed with the others around the Christ Child, it's as if the final joyous note of the year-end festival has been rung.

Nowadays, the boisterous family parties of my childhood are no more. Instead, I content myself with dreaming of them as I enjoy the final hours of our family tree. But, inwardly, the joy is the same as I remember the message of Little Christmas.

American Designer Goes Wild on Patriotic Theme—Uses Red, White and Blue Lavishly

NEW YORK (UPI)—The designer Norman Norell could have called his fashion collection for spring and summer the "old glory" look.

The designer used the red, white and blue theme so often in both daytime and late day wear that no one in his crowded Seventh Avenue showroom opening for buyers Tuesday would have been surprised had he marched in a band playing "The Star Spangled Banner."

This pace-setting designer, who holds numerous awards for his work and who is copied throughout all ready-to-wear price ranges, also kept skirts short for both day and late day. The one exception—his dressy pyjamas, as jewel-bedecked as any fancy ball gown.

The long evening dress is out, he ruled. The short "night shirt" formal is in, a loosely fitted, collarless, long-sleeved shape just reaching the knees. But these were about the fanciest night shirts around—hemlines and cuffs trimmed with silver beading, or all-over sequined combinations in plains and horizontal stripes. In the latter was one in assorted shades of red, blue, white, pink and other shadings.

A fringe of beading at hemline and at the wrists completed the "formal."

The silhouette throughout the Norell collection is narrow—long overblouses, unbelted, topping narrow, accordion pleated skirts. There wasn't a gew-gaw in the collection unless you could count the phony white gardenia put on the shoulder of many suits, on the crown of a hat, or the single strand ropes of pearls shown with his daytime suits, the single ropes of rhinestones for evening.

Suit jackets are unbelted, and range from just a few inches below the waistline to an almost tunic, fingertip length. Most are the collarless, cardigan types, but in some instances he buttons them in single or double-breasted fashion, giving them small, flat collars with notched lapels. Nearly always beneath—the slim-hanging, pleated skirt.

The red, white and blue category included: a white sleeveless silk crepe blouse, with streamer bow at the throat, topping a navy pleated skirt, plus a red jacket; the latter two parts in lightweight wool;

A three-piece costume of white crepe blouse, navy skirt with a two inch border of red at the hem, the red repeated on border of the navy cardigan jacket;

A mostly navy costume with tunic length cardigan jacket, shown with white crepe blouse, with the Peter Pan collar finished with a big red satin bow;

A navy wool jacket, cardigan style, paired with navy crepe overblouse and a white accordion pleated skirt, and finished off with a skater's scarf of red satin looped high around the throat;

And, a slim navy wool, unbelted, with long, fully cut sleeves for the tuck-in white blouse, and a red band trimming the V-cut throat of the jumper and inset belt-like just below the waistline.

Storm Signals Always Aloft For Ferry Crews

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Labor Reporter

The provincial government ferries are manned by civil servants.

This isn't news, but its implications lie behind many of the complaints that come from a number of the 1,200 men and women who work the 19 operational ferries.

Under an amendment to the Civil Service Act a year ago, ferry employees were brought under its jurisdiction.

This confirmed on paper what had always been the case—that they are government workers.

Because they come under the Civil Service Act, they don't enjoy the rights and obligations of the Labour Relations Act.

The ferry workers, along with other civil servants, cannot bargain collectively with the government, with a signed contract legally binding on both sides.

Under the Civil Service Act, employees have "representation rights"—that is, they may make representations to the Civil Service Commission.

Red Tape

This may or may not resolve problems, but ferry workers say the procedures are bound up in red tape that lead to frustration in settling problems satisfactorily.

Anyone with a grievance must go to his supervisor first. Then it may go to the personnel officer of the Civil Service Commission and if he can't handle it it goes on to the commission itself.

There is then an arbitration procedure, but it hasn't been used for at least five years.

A major problem is that ferry workers are part of an operational business and other civil servants aren't. They have much different problems to other government departments.

Losing Battle

For years, the B.C. Government Employees' Association has tried unsuccessfully to gain collective bargaining.

The association, largely ignored by ferry workers, put the problem in two succinct sentences in a report to its annual convention last September:

"Your representatives pointed out to the (Civil Service) Commission that it was obvious from our experience to date that these employees, as members of former unions, had enjoyed bargaining rights, signed agreement and union security.

"It was very obvious that they felt they were entitled to the same considerations now they are employees of the government."

The report also said the commission "did not feel they could recommend to government bargaining rights for ferry employees as an individual group or that there be in effect a contract."

Under Contract

One ferry employee, who wished to remain anonymous, said many of the crew members have been used to working under contract as members of maritime unions.

"When you have these conditions things run smoother," he said.

Even if the men joined a maritime union, it is doubtful if there would be any improvement since collective bargaining rights must be granted by the government.

There has never been any indication that the government is prepared to do this.

A glance back over the past 30 months indicates the unrest in B.C. Ferries.

In September, 1963, there was a walkout at Nanaimo protesting a schedule of 43 days with only three days off and no overtime.

In the fall of the following year, the B.C. Government Employees' Association said two captains and four first officers resigned over promotion policies. Ferry management said the resignations were for a variety of reasons, including personal.

In December, 1964, a ferry worker telephoned The Times to say a new schedule called for a 72-hour, six-day work week for three months on a new Gulf Islands service.

A copy of the schedule showed the information to be correct. The schedule did, however, provide for less work at other times of the year, averaging out at 41 hours a week over 12 months.

Ferry management said it wanted to keep one crew working the whole year, rather than employing it for three months and then laying it off.

Thrown Out

But in February of the following year, the 72-hour week was discarded.

An eight-hour day, six days a week schedule was introduced for summer, with overtime pay for everything over 40 hours in one week. The ferry service was cancelled for the rest of the year.

"It was simply a management decision," said B.C. Ferries.

In March of last year the provincial legislature passed an amendment to the Civil Service Act making ferry employees, and some others, civil servants.

Last April, a sudden walkout delayed the sailing of the Queen of Esquimalt from Swartz Bay by half an hour. A crewman said it was a protest at "poor working conditions and substandard wages."

Eight days later rumors spread of another walkout, but it did not materialize.

Denial Issued

On April 30, B.C. Ferries issued a statement denying that ships were undermanned and employees underpaid.

The statement said crew complements met the requirements of the Canada Shipping Act and wages compared favorably with other B.C. operations such as Northland Navigation, Canadian National and Canadian Pacific ships.

Wages for seamen were given as $355 a month and $335 for stewards. They topped the list.

In May, the 600 or so men signed up by the B.C. Government Employees' Association began resigning and refusing to pay voluntary dues. They said the association wasn't getting results.

A few months later, the association lifted the branch charter for ferry employees because of "minimal support."

The association didn't hire an organizer to replace one who resigned and announced it would not, unless it represented a majority, attempt to negotiate any conditions of employment.

It would, however, deal with individual grievances arising from breaches of conditions providing the employee was a member in good standing in the association.

Last month, the new 1966 schedule was publicly disclosed when ferry employees telephoned The Times.

It provides for 10 consecutive shifts on days, four days off, and then 10 consecutive shifts on nights.

The employees said it means few weekends at home with families.

One prophetic employee said: "They'll have to change this new schedule for they'll be a strike."

Three weeks later, on New Year's Day when hourly weekend sailings commenced, two crews at Swartz Bay walked out forcing the cancellation of three sailings from the terminal.

They agreed to go back to work and put their grievances to a Civil Service Commission meeting. This started Tuesday and was adjourned to next Wednesday.

'Gets Reported'

The general manager of B.C. Ferries, Monty Aldous, was asked why the public is always hearing these personnel problems.

He said: "We are a government service and what we do is news and gets reported.

"If you were to go to any industry of this scope and report every grievance you will find that we have a minimal amount of grievances. The ferry service has been in operation six years and there have not been that many grievances.

"I'm not saying there's no problem. You can't operate an industry of this size without having some peole who have grievances.

"We would like to have every grievance brought to our attention and nip it in the bud. The employees phone you, but I rarely get phone calls."

Soaked Citizen Tries to Soak Union

NEW YORK (AP) — Some citizens in this strike-crippled city have done more than just grumble about the inconvenience of idled subways and buses.

Gerald Kearney, 48, a lawyer, has filed a $25,000 damage suit in state Supreme Court against Mike Quill, head of the striking Transport Workers Union, (AFL-CIO).

Kearney said he filed the papers after he got soaked while walking from his Brooklyn home to his downtown Manhattan office in the rain.

"If I recover damages," he said, "this theoretically opens the door to all citizens who have been damaged."

George Nemiroff, owner of a mid-Manhattan drug store, obtained a summons for Quill's arrest but was rebuffed by Quill aides from serving it personally on the union leader as he was leaving a negotiating session Tuesday.

Nemiroff said the summons was the first step in a $100,000 damage suit he filed in state Supreme Court because of loss of business due to the strike.

FEAR maintains order in South Africa, says author-politician Alan Paton. His passport was lifted by the government following a 1959 visit to Canada and the United States when he made anti-apartheid statements. Paton, leader of S. Africa's Liberal Party, says the fear is not confined to opponents of the government.

Former RCMP Commissioner S. T. Wood Dies

OTTAWA (CP) — Former RCMP commissioner Stuart Taylor Wood, C.M.G., who retired from the force in 1951 after 39 years of service, died here Tuesday. He was 76.

Funeral services are to be held in Regina Friday and he will be buried at the RCMP cemetery there.

A native of Napaneee, Ont., commissioner Wood spent his early service in the Canadian North. He was at one time in charge of the force in British Columbia and became commissioner in 1938, succeeding Sir James McBrien.

His outstanding service was rewarded in 1937 when he was selected to be in charge of the RCMP contingent at the coronation of King George VI.

15,000 STUDENTS AFFECTED

Hull Teachers Join Strike

MONTREAL (CP)—A strike by 285 Roman Catholic teachers in suburbs east of Montreal moved into its second day today while teachers in the district of Hull, Que., started another strike.

The strike near Montreal involves teachers in six communities administered by the regional school board of Le Gardeur. They want higher wages, better work benefits and seniority privileges.

Some 8,000 pupils in 18 schools are going without classes in the communities of Charlemagne, Lavaltrie, Repentigny, St. Paul l'Ermite, St. Sulpice and Le Gardeur.

The Hull strike, which affects 33 Catholic schools in the area of Quebec near Ottawa, is aimed at winning higher salaries for the teachers.

There are 354 teachers in the Hull Association of Catholic School Teachers, and 7,553 students in the schools affected.

The Hull teachers and school board reached deadlock on a collective agreement after 19 months' negottation. The teachers want an average wage increase of $800 a year and equal pay for men and women.

Still another strike—involving 123 teachers in the Papineau regional school board—is set for Monday.

OTHERS DECIDE TODAY

Back in the Montreal area, some 300 teachers in Vaudreuil and Soulanges decide today whether to accept a new contract offered by school authorities covering social security, working conditions and salaries. A strike here would affect some 10,000 children.

The Le Gardeur walkout is the first legal strike, as such, by teachers in Quebec. Formerly teachers held what they called "study sessions."

An act passed by the Quebec legislature last year gave public employees, including teachers, the right to strike provided they gave eight days prior notice to the provincial labor department.

In Montreal, Alexandre Dugre, chief negotiator for the Quebec Federation of Catholic School Boards in the dispute with the teachers of Le Gardeur, said the boards are willing to make concessions of $145,000 more than the amount provided by the provincial department of education. But the teacher' demands would cost $450,000 more, he said.

Walkout a Flop—Officials; A Success, Claim Students

NEW YORK (AP)—The twin campuses of St. John's University appeared almost certain targets for more picketing today in a dispute over what role the faculty should play in policy-setting at the largest Roman Catholic college in the U.S.

Teachers, students and trade unionists picketed the campuses in Jamaica and Brooklyn Tuesday on the first day of a strike sparked by the pre-holiday dismissal of 31 professors.

Strike leaders claimed a complete success in their efforts to shatter the teaching schedule of the school, while university officials said the strike was a flop.

The AFL-CIO Federation of College Teachers maintained that "teaching is impossible under present conditions at the university."

Mayor John V. Lindsay offered to provide mediators to help iron out the dispute which has been simmering since last spring.

TURNS OFFER DOWN

Rev. Joseph Tinnelly, special counsel to the university's board of trustees, turned down the offer on the grounds that "bargaining, mediation and the like are appropriate in many other areas, but are not appropriate in the academic areas."

Father Tinnelly estimated about 90 per cent of the university's 18,000 regular students showed up for class, despite a city-wide subway and bus strike.

He also said only 43 of 651 teachers did not show up, adding that normally about 25 professors are absent on any given day.

Dr. Israel Kugler, president of the union, said 200 teachers were absent.

"The normal education process has ceased at both the Jamaica and Brooklyn campuses."

Far East Talks Set

LONDON (Reuters) — British ministers will fly to Washington and Australia at the end of this month for talks on closer Far East defence links between the United States, Britain, Australia and New Zealand, well-informed sources here said today. Both Foreign Secretary Michael Stewart and Defence Secretary Denis Healey will be in Washington Jan. 27 for talks with U.S. officials.

SUPPORTS THE STRIKE

The school's student council has not taken a stand in the dispute, but the National Student Association announced its support of the strike. The association, with headquarters in Washington, claims to represent 300 college student governments.

The association said it backed the strike "because of the enormity of the violations at St. John's."

Father Tinnelly denied union charges that the school had imported seminarians, or flown in priests from Florida, to take the place of striking teachers.

The 31 professors were notified before leaving on the Christmas holidays that their teaching contracts would not be renewed when they ran out in the coming months.

The school accused most of the professors dismissed of "unprofessional conduct" in their drive against alleged lack of academic freedom.

OUTSTANDING WORK

Press Club to Honor Veteran Journalists

OTTAWA (CP)—Ross Munro, publisher of The Canadian and Stuart Keate publisher of the Vancouver Sun, will receive the second National Press Club of Canada awards for outstanding contributions to journalism, it was announced Tuesday.

The veteran journalists will accept the award at the annual press club ball Feb. 11.

Mr. Munro spent his early years with The Canadian Press, joining the national news-gathering co-operative in 1937.

After spending the Second World War as a war correspondent, he worked in Europe for the news agency before leaving in 1948 to join Southam News Services.

He became editor of a Southam paper, the Vancouver Province, in 1951 and later was named publisher of the Winnipeg Tribune, another Southam newspaper.

He was shifted from this post last year to head The Canadian, a new weekly magazine supplement put out by Southam and the Toronto Star.

Mr. Keate, president of The Canadian Press, worked on the Vancouver Province and Toronto Star in prewar days.

He spent the war as a navy information officer and then joined Time magazine. He resigned as chief of Time's Montreal bureau in 1950 to become publisher of the Victoria Times. He went to the Sun in 1964.

Although the awards are not yet formally on an annual basis, they were begun last year when the winners were George Ferguson, editor-in-chief of the Montreal Star, and Claude Ryan, publisher of Le Devoir.

U.K. Ships Blamed

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — State department said Tuesday small British-flag vessels registered in Hong Kong are the main "free-world" ships still engaged in trade with North Viet Nam. The department reported a marked reduction in the number of non-Communist flag ships calling at North Vietnamese ports in the last few months.

Lowland Residents Flee Homes

EUREKA, Calif. (AP) — More than 1,000 persons fled their homes in northwestern California lowlands as rivers crested, leaving some areas flooded today.

Rain, snow and mud slides closed some major highways and rail routes into storm-lashed northern California.

The Eel River, running into the Pacific Ocean about 200 miles north of San Francisco, reached flood level Tuesday but then rose only slightly as rains eased.

Other rivers that twist through the heavily wooded country either stopped rising or began to recede.

The weather bureau said an intense, new storm lurked off the coast, preparing to smash into delta regions still rebuilding from the disastrous Christmas floods of 1964.

But forecasters said duplication of that devastation could be avoided.

BURNS KKK RECORDS

'Afraid of Communists' Klan Head Tells Hearing

WASHINGTON — John D. Swenson of Bossier, La., told the House un-American activities committee Tuesday that he couldn't turn over any records of the Ku Klux Klan because he had burned them all "so they wouldn't get into the hands of the enemy."

"Who is the enemy?" asked committee chairman Edwin E. Willis (D-La.).

"The Communists," said the 55-year-old Swenson, who was described as the father of the modern-day Klan in Louisiana. "... The Communists would like to get their hands on it."

"Course I imagine," he added glumly, that "they have it now."

Swenson said he had burned all his Klan papers in his backyard in March of 1964. And that was about all he would say about his career in the Ku Klux Klan.

Swenson and four other Louisianans declined to tell the committee anything about the workings of the Klan down in chairman Willis' home state, although Swenson said, "Sir, I respect this commmittee very much . . . and I'm trying to answer your questions, sir without incriminating myself."

As the committee resumed its public hearings on the Klan after a two-month break, most of the questions concerned the money-raising functions of the original knights of the Ku Klux Klan-Louisiana.

Swenson, for instance, was asked whether he hadn't burned his books because he was afraid his fellow Klansmen might get to them. Chief investigator Donald T. Appell said Swenson had been suspected of enriching himself from the sale of Klan robes and suggested that the papers "would document the charges."

But Swenson insisted, in response to questions, that "I didn't know anything about this fuss . . . it was the Communists I was afraid of."

Appell asked Swenson about "wrecking crews," which he said are six-man bands in each Klan unit that enforce the Klan oath of secrecy. Swenson also was asked whether Klansmen were involved in a series of bombings in Shreveport in 1962.

To all such questions, however, Swenson and the other witnesses invoked constitutional amendments against self-incrimination. Four of them were represented by attorney James R. Venable of Atlanta, the imperial wizard of the National Knights of the Ku Klux Klan.

Venable himself said he is scheduled to appear before the committee on Jan. 27.

FELLOW STUDENTS PROTEST SHOOTING

TUSKEGEE, Ala. (UPI) — A young Negro civil rights worker was shot to death Tuesday, touching off a 1,500-man sympathy march by his angry fellow students and bringing a call for federal marshals.

Marvin Segrest, a white 69-year-old service station worker, was charged with first degree murder in the slaying.

The victim was 21-year-old Samuel L. Young, Jr., a navy veteran and a political science major at predominantly Negro Tuskegee Institute.

Young was slain after reportedly trying to use a rest room at the service station where Segrest worked as the night attendant.

Andy Stephen Looks at TV

A few days ago, the sports pages mentioned the $37,600,000 agreement between CBS-TV and the National Football League for exclusive TV rights to two years of NFL regular season and pre-season games.

It is the largest single sports pact in the history of television.

Stephen

The figure represents slightly over one-third of the total figure to be spent by the three American networks on sports programming. Because of the great sports audience, the cost of the trio for rights to various sports events will reach an all-time high next season, $100,000,000.

The home sports fan will therefore be in seventh heaven as the cameras roam over such events as professional football, baseball, golf, college football, hockey, tennis, sports spectaculars and racing's Triple Crown.

The CBS-TV agreement with the NFL is higher than the previous record figure paid by a network for broadcast rights to a sports event.

NBC-TV had paid $30,000,000 in buying the rights to three seasons of the Game of the Week from the major leagues, and for two years of the All-Star game and the World Series.

The CBS-TV coverage of the football games will be in color and next year's plans include televising three regular season night games in the prime time periods.

At the same time, the NFL has modified its blackout restrictions on an experimental basis. When a team is at home, viewers in that area will see another NFL game, thus they will see a league game every Sunday.

This latter scheme could easily be adapted by the Canadian Football League when negotiating with the agency or networks on television rights here. But, then, that would be too much to ask. Something for nothing, indeed!

* * * *

TID BITS: An all-Gershwin program is set for "Telephone Hour" Jan. 30, with Polly Bergen as hostess. Other performers include Diahann Carroll, Andre Previn and John Raitt.

"The Voice of the Dragon," a one-hour NBC-TV documentary about the mass indoctrination and persuasion undertaken by the Red Chinese, airs Feb. 6, with film provided by a French camera crew that recently spent four months in the Communist nation.

TWELFTH NIGHT

The BIG Clean-Up For GOOD LUCK

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Seated around the dining room table in a friend's home the other evening (picking turkey bones and eating left-overs from the New Year's Day feast) the talk turned lazily to the length of time Yuletide decorations should be left in place.

Forbes

"I like them out of the way as soon as the new year is in," said our hostess, with a determined nod of her head.

She was telling the truth. As we looked around the only things that reminded us of the festive season was an arrangement of holly in the centre of the table and a ceramic Santa and reindeer above the fireplace.

"That would be put away, too," said the daughter of the house, "only mother didn't have time to pack it properly."

Just then, a guest chipped in with the information that she liked to leave her decorations up until the holly begins to turn brown and the needles start dropping from the cedar boughs.

★ ★ ★

"You'd better throw them out before Twelfth Night, if you want good luck in 1966, said the sentimentalist among us.

There was a sudden silence. Then the youngest in the group grinned. "Surely you don't believe in that nonsense," is what she said.

Nonsense it may be but I'll wager there's been a grand clean-up in many homes today as housewives took down the last of the holiday greens—the tree, the cedar boughs, the pine cones and the holly.

In the next 24 hours there will be a further sweeping up of pine needles, putting of decorations away, airing out of rooms and geting rid of every speck of dust.

In some cases, greeting card lists will even be made for another year and the cards themselves will either be given away or burned.

★ ★ ★

For Thursday brings Twelfth Night! And no one who has a speck of superstition (perhaps I should call it imagination) in their make-up will have Yuletide decorations of any sort in their rooms after the stroke of 12 tomorrow night.

As a good omen for the days ahead, everything must also be shining and clean. No grime or dust left over from the old year.

The superstition includes the burning of the tree, the cedar boughs and the holly, if possible, to bring luck into the home.

January six is the twelfth night after Christmas. Twelfthtide it is sometimes called.

Actually it is the Eve of Epiphany.

In some churches it heralds a religeous festival that commemorates the visit of the Magi of the East of Bethlehem, to see and worship the child Jesus.

★ ★ ★

The others of the festival marks the appearance of the star to the Magi and symbolizes the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles.

The word Epiphany itself means "an appearance."

How or why have embodied it in a traditional ceremony of our own, no one around the dining table in our friend's home the other night could say.

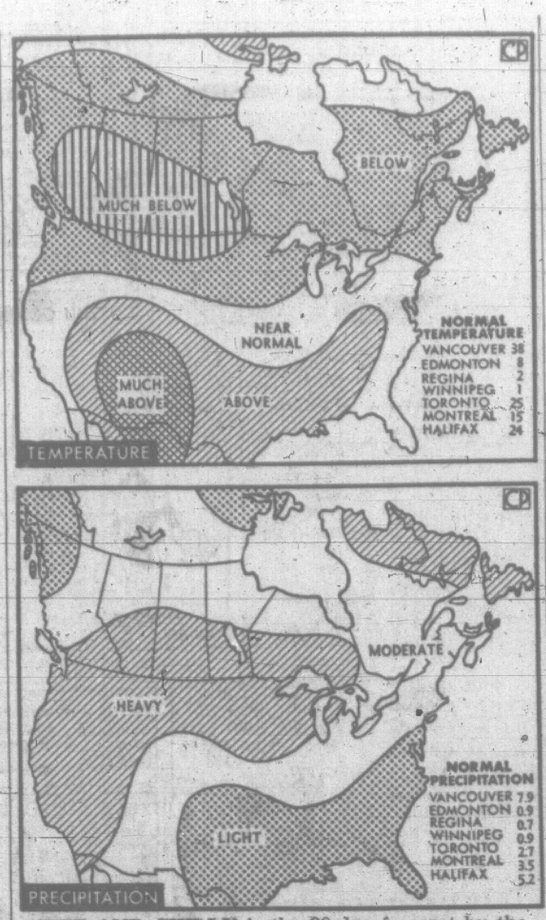
"It goes away back into the past," said our hostess.

Perhaps the significance is in having our homes clean and trim to meet the good that must surely come our way in days ahead," said a guest.

The sentimentalist insisted it was "for luck"; the youngest in the group murmured "superstition, superstition".

However, now that the time has come, we've all conformed to custom and cleaned house for this year of 1966.

Thursday brings Twelfth Night!



WET AND CHILLY is the 30-day forecast by the U.S. Weather Bureau for southern Vancouver Island. The Interior can expect much below normal temperatures and the only area in Canada in the "near-normal" range is southern Ontario.

Special Course To Be Offered Family Doctors

TORONTO (CP) — Medical schools in Calgary and London, Ont., will offer North America's first formal three-year, post-graduate courses in general practice next summer.

The College of General Practice of Canada announced Tuesday candidates now are being selected to take the courses at the University of Western Ontario and the University of Alberta.

Dr. John B. Corley, director of the Calgary course, said seven of the 10 places in the residency program there have been awarded to students from the four medical schools in Western Canada—the Universities of Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

The course begins at Calgary General Hospital July 1.

Dalhousie University medical school in Halifax has been studying a similar program for general practitioners for some time but no decision has yet been reached.

The University of Western Ontario hopes to expand the program to make an extra two-year program leading to the same certificate available to graduates who have already done a year's rotating internship.

A general practitioner now may set up practice after graduation from medical school and one year of rotating internship in an accepted hospital.

The new courses at London and Calgary are integrated three-year courses taking in the mandatory one year internship.

Students in the Calgary course will also be taught by specialists and general practitioners and will receive experience in home and office calls as well as hospital work. In their final year, they will be assigned to a rural hospital for a month and will take over a family doctor's practice for another month, freeing him for a period of refresher study.

The new programs reflect the views of the College of General Practice that a family doctor needs as much training as a specialist.

SECT MEMBER

'Started Paying His Debt'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Marvin Hafley, 30, of neighboring North Vancouver has started paying a debt to the United States that has been on his conscience since 1959.

Hafley, a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, was sentenced to not more than a year in prison in Seattle Monday for failing to follow a draft board order.

His wife, Marion, 30, told his story in an interview Tuesday:

They settled in St. Louis where Hafley was considered by the draft board as a conscientious objector because of his religion which forbids killing.

The draft board ordered him to work in a Kansas City hospital.

"He did not want to compromise. At the time, he was only earning $20 a week and I was pregnant. I couldn't get a job if he had to leave home, so we decided to ignore the order and come to Canada."

Hafley became a Canadian citizen.

But ignoring the order was on his conscience. The couple wanted their daughter, Elaine, now 6, to be in school before he did anything about it.

LOCAL BRIEFS

Two provincial government departments should cross the threshold of their new quarters in the former liquor warehouse here about mid-summer.

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant said Tuesday a contract will be awarded in a few weeks, after tenders are obtained, for renovation of the interior of the building at Fort and Wharf Street. It was vacated last fall by the Liquor Control Board.

Recreation and Conservation Department branches, now scattered in a variety of locations, and the Municipal Affairs Department offices will be brought together under one roof in the building.

★ ★ ★

Charles C. Ogilvie, 425 Wilson, was fined $125 in central court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended.

Court was told he was involved in a minor accident Monday at Blanshard and Johnson Streets.

★ ★ ★

Advance tax payments totalled $50,000 at city hall Monday, a drop from the $77,000 paid on the first working day of 1965.

City officials were not perturbed by the $23,000 drop.

James Bramley, city comptroller, said bad weather had probably kept a good percentage of citizens seeking the four per cent discount for pre-paid taxes at home.

Youngsters Still in Coma

A son and daughter of a Victoria family injured in a car accident Dec. 22 are still in critical condition in an Oregon hospital but the girl shows a slight improvement.

Christopher Baker, 10, and Susan Baker, 13, children of Wing Commander and Mrs. James Baker, 3034 Westdowne, are still unconscious at Rogue Valley Hospital, Medford, Ore.

Wing Cmdr. Baker, a surgeon at Naden Hospital, was uninjured in the accident. His wife and their two other daughters have been discharged from hospital. Their car overturned on an icy road while they were en route to San Francisco for a holiday.

Residents of the area around the hospital, who read of the Bakers' plight, tried to help them celebrate Christmas.

Wing Cmdr. Baker said "more than 100 persons—total strangers—visited us in hospital. They came to bring Christmas greetings. He described Medford as "this wonderful, Christian community."

A local boy even found the Bakers dog that was lost after the accident. He brought the dog to hospital and it is now with the Bakers who are staying on in Medford.

Relatives of the Baker family, with whom they were going to stay in San Francisco, drove up to Medford to spend the Christmas season with them.

'Yankee Imperialism Number One Enemy'

By MICHAEL ARKUS

HAVANA (Reuters)—Part of a U.S. plane downed by Laotian Communists formed part of the archives of the tri-continental anti-imperialist conference today following blistering attacks by delegates on U.S. world policy.

Speaker after speaker, representing countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America, mounted the rostrum on the second day of the conference Tuesday to blast "Yankee imperialism, the number one enemy of our peoples."

The attacks ranged from Viet Nam to The Congo and from the Dominican Republic to Palestine.

So numerous were the charges levelled against "Yankee imperialism" that the speakers overran their alloted time. The conference president, Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Rao, repeatedly called them to order to keep to the 20-minute limit.

The speakers called on the non-governmental conference, which has brought together delegates from Communist and revolutionary parties and guerrilla movements in three continents, to establish unity of action in the face of the "worst criminal of our era."

As a symbol of their struggle, the delegate of the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong guerrillas, presented the conference with a weapon made by the Viet Cong.

PRESENTS PLANE PART

The Laotian delegate presented a piece of a U.S. plane shot down by pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces.

The Viet Cong delegate joined the North Vietnamese representative in calling on the conference to condemn the U.S. as a war criminal.

Both delegates made a distinction between the U.S. government and the American people, whom they said supported the Vietnamese cause.

They accused President Johnson of "two faced policy proposing unconditional negotiations on the one hand and stepping up his invasion forces on the other."

The two delegates also attacked "U.S. imperialism" in Laos, Cambodia, North Borneo, Santo Domingo, the Panama Canal and The Congo.

Cayetano Armando Rodriguez, of the Dominican Republic, told the conference:

"Our country took Cuba as an example for our revolution—we will never cease to denounce the crime of North American imperialism and we will fight even more intensely."

Palestinian delegate Ibrahim Abu Sitta called on the conference to pass a resolution "condemning Israel as a base of U.S. imperialism and exhorting all progressive forces and countries to sever all political, economic and cultural relations with Israel."

Evil Spirit Gone; Eskimo Woman Shot

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP)—Poor flying weather has prevented the RCMP from completing its investigation into the shooting death of an Eskimo woman at Fort Ross, on the Boothia Peninsula of the Northwest Territories.

A preliminary investigation has disclosed that 40-year-old Soosee was killed because other Eskimos believed she was possessed by evil spirits.

Soosee, who had been treated for mental illness, travelled and hunted with three families near Fort Ross, a Hudson's Bay Company trading post established in 1937 but abandoned five years later because of difficulties in bringing in company supplies.

Eskimos in the area live off the land. They stay in tents during the summer and snowhouses in the winter.

Informants say that Soosee was creating a disturbance in Fort Ross last summer, throwing stones and damaging tents. The three families then called a meeting at which it was decided that evil spirits possessed her and that she would have to be shot.

Police in Spence Bay, some 200 miles north of Fort Ross, learned of her death two months later and flew into the area in September. They had to take off a short time later because ice conditions threatened to trap them in Fort Ross for several months.

Isachee Shooyook, 20, a nephew of the dead woman, has been charged with capital murder. He appeared in a Yellowknife court Oct. 18 and later was released to continue hunting until his case comes to trial.

The death of Soosee recalls the slaying of nine persons in the Belcher Islands in the winter of 1941.

A group of five Eskimos, interpreting the New Testament to mean that they were divine, killed nine other Eskimos who doubted their divinity.

The five Eskimos were sentenced to two years in jail when the "Belcher Islands massacre" case went to trial.

Sing Sing Prison Inmates Stage Strike

OSSINGING, N.Y. (AP)—Most of the inmates of Sing Sing prison have gone on strike against work, demanding state provisions for quicker paroles.

Warden Wilfred L. Denno said more than 1,700 of the prison's 1,821 inmates who refused to go to their jobs in the prison shops Monday were still striking Tuesday.

Most of the strikers began sitting in the stands of the baseball field, where they were sheltered from the rain, after breakfast Monday.

When they refused again after lunch to go to work, Denno ordered them locked in their cells, to be let out only for meals until the demonstration ended.

HE GIVES AWAY GRAND PRIZES

Is there something you want to know? Do you want to win a set of valuable books or other instructive prizes? Then ask Andy.

Andy will answer questions submitted by child readers and those who submit the questions he selects to answer will receive worthwhile prizes.

The youngster who asks the first question answered each day receives a 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia and of the second question a Hammond Atlas or Globe.

Andy sends a complete, 20-volume set of the World Book Encyclopedia to David Dunn, age 10, of Coventry, R.I., for his question:

Why does a hurricane have an eye?

Nothing, it seems, is 100 per cent good or 100 per cent bad. There may be a worm in the rosiest apple and a strip of blue sky on the rainiest day. There is even a spell of calm weather in the middle of a howling hurricane. This short period of peaceful quiet is the hurricane's eye.

The eye of a hurricane is at the very heart of the huge and furious storm. It is the basic cause that sets the storm in motion and it keeps its raging winds spiraling inward toward the centre. This seems strange, because the eye is a brief spell of calm, sunny weather, and if you were in the path of the hurricane you would wish that the eye would spread to the surrounding storm. Your wish would not help. But if the calm eye were removed, the winds around it would subside.

A hurricane is a vast cyclone storm somewhat like a monstrous, whirling doughnut made of clouds and winds. It is born on a tropical sea when the sun heats a patch of air above the water. The warm air expands and rises. Warm air spreads out and becomes thin and the column of rising air is less dense than the air around it. The denser air flows and blows toward the lighter air, very much as water in a pail flows in to fill up the hole when you take out a scoopful.

Tangling trade winds and the spinning earth twist the inflowing winds. They spiral toward the column of rising air at the heart of the young hurricane. But the inflowing air does not fill up the light pocket. Instead, it too becomes warm and light and joins the updraft. The storm grows and the winds become wilder as more air is drawn inward and upward by the eye of the hurricane.

May be 400 Miles Wide

The howling storm loses its energy as it buffets the waves of the sea and plows a path of destruction over the land. Gradually, the denser surrounding air mixes and blends with the light eye of the hurricane. The restless atmosphere is blended together and the winds die down.

A spiraling hurricane may be 400 miles wide. The eye is a funnel in the dense clouds, perhaps 20 miles wide near the ground and much wider 10 miles up at the top of the storm. It passes overhead in about half an hour and then the wild winds spiral in from another direction.

From a weather plane, the eye looks like a well of clear water in the soupy clouds. Its steep, dark walls form where two mighty weather forces exactly balance each other. Here the force of the spiraling winds exactly equals the force pulling the air into the light, rising column at the heart of the hurricane. Here the wild winds cease their spiraling and the air rises aloft forming the calm eye.

YOUR HEALTH

Tell Youngsters The Cause of Acne

By DR. WALTER ALVAREZ

Alvarez

Acne is the common disease of the skin of the face and back of girls and boys. Because the pimples usually appear about the time of puberty, perhaps about the age of 12 or 14, and because so commonly the disease clears up by itself at the age of 20 or 22, and because it can be brought out in older people by the giving of male hormone, it appears that the malady must have something to do with sexual development.

Someday, perhaps when one certain hormone is identified as the cause, and when some drug is found which will neutralize this hormone, acne can be cured overnight. There must be a hereditary factor, because severe acne runs in some families and no acne appears in others.

* * *

The youngster who has a strong tendency to acne (pimples) is likely to have too much activity in the tiny fat-forming glands in the skin of the face. When one of these glands cannot empty itself, a "blackhead" is formed. The blackness of the outer end of the little white column of sebum or fat is due not to dirt, but to a combination of the sebum with the oxygen of the air. I feel strongly that the best thing many youngsters can do is quickly to squeeze out the tiny white plug of a blackhead before it can become infected and can turn into a little abscess or pimple. It is the abscess-formation which makes the skin look bad, and which eventually causes the pitting in bad cases of acne.

As we all know, there are different degrees of severity of acne. Some youngsters have only a few shallow pimples, while others have a severe form of the disease with much abscess formation. Often with a severe form of the disease, the glands in the skin of the back become involved. In some cases, it looks as if the glands in the youngster's skin are too susceptible to invasion by pus-forming germs. Some skin specialists then try giving antibiotics, but this treatment does not always work well enough.

* * *

For years, some skin specialists have thought that the eating of certain foods makes acne worse. Some doctors warn against drinking chocolate malted milks, and other fatty foods; but other specialists are not sure that foods influence the severity of the disease. It is probably well for a youngster who is inclined to get acne to watch and see if the eating of much fat, and perhaps much chocolate, makes his skin worse.

Unfortunately, the young person with acne suffers much psychic distress—with a fear of social rejection. Hence, these youngsters should be encouraged, and told what is true, that in a few years the disease will disappear by itself.

* * *

When it comes to treatment, one of the most important points is that hundreds of thousands of youngsters who suffer with acne live in small communities where there is no skin specialist to help them. Other hundreds of thousands of youngsters live in a city where there is a skin specialist, but either their parents cannot afford to send them, or the youngster hasn't the time after school to go downtown to see the doctor. Hence, it is that the most important thing that the patient can do is, at least twice a day, to scrub his face, perhaps with a rough soap, like a lava soap. This tends to get rid of the outer horny layer of the skin which can block the mouths of the tubes holding the blackheads. When the mouth of a blackhead tube is opened up, the sebum can come out more easily. Also, the soap gets rid of much of the grease which causes most of the trouble.

Some skin specialists recommend that the youngster, after he scrubs his face with soap and water, rinse it off with some germ killing drug, such as alcohol. "Drying creams" of several types can be used after the washing with soap. Also, it helps for the face to become exposed to the sun for a while. An ultraviolet light, if it is available, will help. While using the light, the youngster must wear goggles, and must be careful not to get too big a dose at the start. Some skin specialists use grenz rays, which are like weak, safe X-rays—they can help much.

Made-in-U.K. Sub On Way to Canada

CHATHAM, England (CP)—The submarine Ojibwa, first in a series of three advanced conventional submarines being built for the Canadian navy at the Chatham shipyards, sailed Tuesday for Halifax.

No arrival date was announced, but the trip is expected to take two to three weeks.

The Ojibwa, under Lt.-Cmdr S. G. Tomlinson, a native of Lac du Bonnet, Man., will be stationed on Canada's East Coast. She has a crew of about 65.

One of the Oberon class of submarines, of which the Royal Navy already has several in service, the Ojibwa was launched in 1964 and commissioned last Sept. 23.

She underwent more than two months of trial runs, tests and final adjustments and equipping.

Two sister subs are on the way here. The Onondaga was launched by Mrs. Paul Hellyer, wife of the Canadian defence minister, Sept. 25 and is to be commissioned early next year. A keel - laying for the third sub, to be called the Okanagan, has taken place.

Several of the Ojibwa's crew had previously spent several years in England with the Royal Navy as part of a continuing training program.

Union Rejects Plea

Resume Service, Asks N.Y. Mayor

NEW YORK (AP) — Union negotiators promptly rejected Mayor John V. Lindsay's plea today for resumption of subway and bus service while labor contract negotiations continue.

Lindsay entered the strike talks on the fifth day of a city-wide transportation paralysis which started the day he took office.

The rejection of his plan came from the second line of union negotiators, now handling the bargaining for the nine officers of two striking unions who were jailed for calling the strike.

Still another court session was scheduled for the afternoon concerning the possibility of levying fines against the officers and the unions.

UNION ADAMANT

Emerging from a session with Lindsay, the mayor's first intervention since being sworn in, a union spokesman said: "No contract no work."

Lindsay's press aide said the mayor intended to stay with the talks until an agreement for service is worked out.

Lindsay had said that if his presence were needed at the talks, the parties would have to come to city hall. Instead, at the call of his three-man mediation panel, he went to the negotiations at the Americana Hotel.

URGE STAGGERED HOURS

Meantime, the morning work rush began to abate. Traffic Commissioner Henry A. Barnes, overseeing the flow, said drivers apparently got an earlier start today.

In an effort to ease the more clogged evening travel rush, the city recommended that businesses in lower Manhattan voluntarily stagger work hours.

"By spreading the peak over a longer period it relieves the pressure," Barnes said. "We'll be able to cope with it."

The bargaining talks were thrown into a turmoil Tuesday by the jailing and collapse of union leader Michael J. Quill. He and eight other officers of two striking unions were arrested on the order of a judge who found them in contempt for ignoring a court order forbidding the strike.

But two hours after entering jail, Quill, a 60-year-old heart patient, collapsed.

QUILL IMPROVED

A Bellevue Hospital spokesman said this morning that Quill "looks improved, his color is back and he's more like himself." The spokesman said specialists still were studying tests to determine whether he had suffered a heart attack.

Adding another dimension to the crisis is the threat that a major commuter lifeline, the Long Island Rail Road, may be halted.

The traffic department estimated at 6 a.m. that the number of cars headed for Manhattan was double the number on Tuesday, which in turn had been twice that of Monday.

Barnes said apparently economic pressures were forcing people to return to work as the strike lengthens.

UN Members Asked for Aid On Viet Peace

U.S. Urges Formula Search

UNITED NATIONS (UPI)—The United States today invited members of the United Nations to do whatever they believe might contribute to peace in Viet Nam.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg delivered for circulation as a security council document a brief report on the world-wide peace offensive launched by President Johnson during Christmas week when a lull was ordered in U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam.

Goldberg then told a news conference that the peace offensive was not a "propaganda exercise" and that no "ultimatum" to the Communists was intended.

He pointed out in his report to the United Nations that the bombing of North Viet Nam has not been resumed since the Christmas truce.

PAUSE TO END

Asked whether this meant the bombing pause would continue or might end soon, Goldberg said of the statement in his letter:

"This is a present fact."

The letter asked all UN members to give "more urgent thought" to the search for a formula to end the Viet Nam war.

He said the U.S. was ready to enter into unconditional negotiations if the government in Hanoi wanted to do so.

The report, Goldberg said, included a summary of the essential points made by President Johnson's emissaries in visits to many capitals on both sides of the iron curtain.

LONG AND INVOLVED

"Mainly, our conversations with heads of state were long and involved," he said, adding he would not divulge the content of any talks except the note from Pope Paul VI to Johnson whose publication was authorized by the pontiff.

Goldberg said the Soviet Union —not visited by any of the Johnson peace envoys—had been advised of "the essential character of what is going on."

Asked if Washington had received any indication from any source, despite its public ridicule of the peace offensive, that Hanoi might be willing to enter peace negotiations, Goldberg said: "We are going to continue these efforts."

Goldberg said Thant was the first to be advised of the peace offensive.

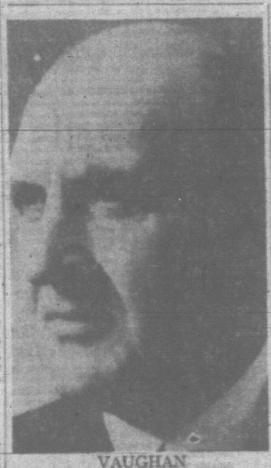
U.S. 'FLYING CRANE' DOWNED BY VIET CONG

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong today shot down a mammoth U.S. army "flying crane" helicopter while it was ferrying ammunition to the Vietnamese central highlands, killing the five Americans aboard. U.S. troops in the same area captured and burned a Communist base camp.

A U.S. spokesman said the $6.25 million twin turbine aircraft called a "Skycrane" was burning before it crashed and that it apparently was the victim of ground fire. It was one of only six in existence. Ammunition aboard exploded for hours afterward, preventing any rescue efforts.

RELIEF FOR VANCOUVER

It's Rain, Rain For City Area



VAUGHAN

Victoria got the all-clear today from weatherman William Mackie.

The thermometer's on the way up and snow's on the way out.

Rain today started the clean-up job. And further rain is forecast for the next few days.

Overnight temperatures will be around 35, rising to 42 during the daytime.

While Victoria is on the road to recovery, the rest of Vancouver Island is wallowing in several feet of snow.

(See story Page 21.)

Intense cold that covered the northern province was to moderate also. Temperatures ranged to 27 below zero at Prince George Tuesday night.

Despite the fact that many Vancouverites were taking buses, traffic in some areas was chaotic. It got worse as a light snow started falling.

Cars parked on all transit routes in the city were towed away by police Tuesday night to give snow-clearing crews a chance.

City health officer Dr. G. A. Mott warned elderly persons not to attempt to shovel their walks. He gave his warning after Arthur V. Johnson, 76, collapsed and died while removing snow from his roof.

At Sandspit on the southern end of the Queen Charlotte Islands the hotel had 60 guests in space normally used by 31. Loggers flying in to the Sandspit airport could not get from there to their isolated camps elsewhere on the islands.

Ex-President Of CNR Dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Charles Vaughan, who rose from a railway messenger boy to president of the CNR, died suddenly at his home here Wednesday. He was 82.

Mr. Vaughan was president of the railway from 1941 to 1950, when he retired after 51 years of railway service.

Immediately prior to the outbreak of war in 1939, he left his job as a CNR vice-president temporarily to organize and head the country's defence purchasing board until it became the nucleus of the ministry of supply.

He then returned to the railway and his 1941 appointment as president. The following year he was named chairman of the CNR's board.

'Abolish Bank Loan Ceiling'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Governments—federal and provincial—were told today to hold the line in spending and not cut taxes to prevent the 1965 economic boom from becoming a bust in 1966.

The Economic Council of Canada also urged in its second report on the state of the economy that the 6 per cent ceiling on bank loans be abolished.

The report called on government to "minimize distortions and instabilities in credit and markets and to ensure easier access by homebuilders, consumers and small business to credit."

Principal recommendation toward this end was the removal of the "arbitrary" 6 per cent ceiling on bank loan interest rates "which currently forces many small borrowers into loans at much higher rates."

The ceiling was "unfavorable to the little fellow," said chairman John Deutch. He said he didn't think removal of the bank rate ceiling would result in the increase of other interest rates.

He said suggested higher rates now demanded by consumer loan companies would likely come down.

TROUBLE SPOTS REMAIN

Safeguards Built-In Against Major Inflation

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Improved productivity through more and better education is the golden key to total prosperity for Canada in the years ahead, the Economic Council of Canada says in its second annual review.

The 28-member advisory council, in a 70,000-word review of the economy made public Tuesday, says there are built-in safeguards against runaway inflation and serious balance of payments difficulties if the authorities will deal effectively with specific trouble spots.

But it argues against fiscal and monetary policies — taxation, government expenditure, money supply and credit easiness—which would further stimulate demand. Needed now, the report says, are measures to stimulate supply rather than demand.

The big gains must be made in productivity and this can be enhanced by more education and worker re-training programs.

Reviewing the past year, the council says Canada surpassed the council's goal in employment and economic growth. Prices did rise higher than the goal set by the council's first annual review a year ago, but the second review says that except for pressures in the construction field, there are no signs of excessive inflation.

EAST NEEDS HELP

The review also says that for 40 years authorities have been trying to boost the less-developed parts of the country, without much success. The main area needing help is the Atlantic provinces and eastern Quebec.

The council, which makes its recommendations publicly to all authorities and not alone to the federal government or any one cabinet minister, says subsidies "merely to create temporary activity or to sustain indefinitely low-productivity industries and declining occupations" should be avoided.

It urges that "efficient agglomerations of activity—growth centres" be encouraged in the less-developed areas to take advantage of mass production, larger markets and more useful pools of skills.

On manpower and productivity, the council recommended the creation of a new manpower ministry—something the federal government plans to do with Jean Marchand as the minister-designate.

In an interview, council chairman John J. Deutsch said this was one of the recommendations in the council's first annual review which he developed in discussions with the government and some ministers.

INDICTED today by grand jury in Washington on charges of tax evasion, conspiracy and other offences was former U.S. Senate aide Robert G. (Bobby) Baker. The indictment charged that Baker understated his income by $54,558 for 1961 and 1962.

Ship Out of Danger As Fire Controlled

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Lines cargo ship laden with paint and rubber caught fire on a rain-swept Atlantic today, but the U.S. Coast Guard said later the blaze has been controlled and the ship is out of danger.

The American Rover was Europe-bound through heavy seas 160 miles off Newfoundland when the fire broke out. It headed for Argentia, Nfld.

The ship reported the fire has been controlled, but still smouldered, the coast guard said.

A coast guard plane, carrying fire equipment, hovered above the burning ship. The ship did not ask it for help.

The fully-automatic ship carried a crew of 39.

A steady rain fell and winds were up to 58 knots.

Strike at Granduc Closes Down Mine

VANCOUVER (CP)—A strike of hourly rated employees of remote Granduc Mines was called today. The workers were in Vancouver for the Christmas holidays and have been prevented by weather from returning to the mine north of Stewart, 90 miles north of Prince Rupert.

Granduc closed the mine Tuesday in anticipation of the strike.

BUILDERS OF B.C. FEATURE BEGINS TODAY

Capsule biographies of 100 Founders of British Columbia comprise a new series starting today on page 5 of The Times.

The feature will appear weekly during the centennial years 1966 and 1967.

In 1966 British Columbia celebrates the passing of 100 years since the union of the Crown Colonies of Vancouver Island and the British Columbia mainland. In 1967 the province joins in the national celebration of the centennary of Confederation.

The series has been prepared by the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of B.C. Its purpose is to better acquaint British Columbians with the lives and accomplishments of a representative group of the men and women who helped to build our province . . . explorers, fur traders, politicians, churchmen and early industrialists.

The committee points out that no project of this sort could mention all the pioneers who built B.C. This sampling is intended, however, to honor them all.

Manhunt Ends In Australia

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (Reuters)—Escaped killer-convicts Ronald Ryan and Peter Walker were recaptured in Sydney tonight, 17 days after they broke jail in Melbourne, following one of the biggest manhunts in Australian history.

Ryan, 41, and Walker, 24, escaped from Melbourne's Pentridge jail, 500 miles from where they were recaptured, on Dec. 19 after clubbing a prison chaplain and shooting dead a guard.

Since their escape, they have been held responsible for robbing a bank of $10,000 and killing a man.

CRUCIAL TEST IN BYELECTION THIS MONTH

Labor Threatened by Viet Nam Policy Foe

LONDON (AP)—A professed radical opened a byelection campaign Tuesday to topple Britain's Labor government because of its support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam. The political mathematics of the government and the district make him a serious threat.

The byelection in the port city of Hull Jan. 27 is shaping up as the most crucial for Prime Minister Wilson's government since it took office in 1964. It was brought on by the death of the Labor member of Paliament for Hull North, Henry Solomons, last November.

Defeat for Labor would reduce its over-all House of Commons majority to one vote. Its prestige would be so badly damaged that Wilson might have to resign.

The challenge to Wilson is posed by Richard Gott, 27, a journalist running as the candidate of a group calling itself the Radical Alliance. Its organizers are leaders of Britain's ban-the-bomb movement, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

In most special elections, Gott normally could expect several hundred votes, a small amount of publicity and a platform to air his views.

He would represent little more than nuisance value to the other candidates: Labor representative Kevin McNamara, 31, a law lecturer at Hull Commercial College; Conservative Toby Jessel, 31, a London exporter, and Mrs. Laurie Millward, a housewife who is the Liberal candidate.

But because of Labor's narrow majority in both the Commons and the Hull North district, Gott is far more than just a nuisance for Labor. In the 1950s, Hull North elected Conservative MPs by margins of less than 1,000 votes. Solomons, the first Labor candidate elected in more than a decade, squeaked in by a margin of 1,181 votes out of a total of 47,717.

All the Conservatives need in Hull is a shift of less than two per cent of the voters away from Labor. They already have done better than that in several byelections during the last year. Gott's votes will come from labor, and they could make all the difference, even if they only number in the hundreds.

"Everyone is interested in the tragedy of Viet Nam," Gott told a reporter. "If I can make Mr. Wilson think again, I will have achieved my purpose."

Looks like they'll hev t' work out New York's transportation problem foot by foot.

Grits Happy With Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson has made it clear he has no plans for an early retirement from politics.

He delivered the message Tuesday both at a press conference and at a closed strategy meeting by Liberal MPs and senators.

Mr. Pearson will turn 69 April 23 and thus qualify for the $75-a-month old age pension.

The party caucus unanimously passed an unusual motion of confidence in his leadership Monday. Caucus chairman Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday Mr. Pearson had been given a 15-year mandate.

Mr. Pearson said he is willing to carry on as party leader as long as he is physically and mentally able. "And at the moment I feel physically and mentally fit."

He was approaching the new Parliament opening Jan. 18 with "great anticipation and eagerness to continue my work as leader of the party and as prime minister."

MAJORITY ELUDES HIM

Mr. Pearson has led his party in four general elections since he was elected leader eight years ago this month. Since then Liberal strength in the Commons has increased to 131 seats from an all-time low of 50 but a clear majority has eluded the former diplomat.

The Liberal MPs and senators met morning, afternoon and night Monday and Tuesday to review the Nov. 8 election and the government's legislative program for this year.

Word leaked out that many backbenchers urged the cabinet to "do something concrete to offset opposition demands for a $100 monthly old age pension. Mr. Pearson opposed this during the campaign, saying it would mean an irresponsible and massive increase in federal spending.

Many Liberals feel the Conservatives' promise of a $100 pension cost the government many votes and prevented the Liberals from gaining a majority in the 265-seat Commons.

The party's dismal showing in the Prairies—one seat out of 48—came in for discussion. Mr. Pearson said western senators made "very constructive suggestions. We hope by our actions, our attitudes and our interest in that area to increase our representation."

The next caucus is set for Tuesday, Jan. 18, immediately before Governor-General Vanier opens the 27th Parliament.

Spring 'Appears' Nearer

By HILDA BEASTALL

Seed catalogs can always be counted on to arrive when we need them most.

They give the spirits a lift, bringing spring nearer with the need for planning and ordering.

Some of the new things this year are really exciting especially among the annuals to be grown from seed for bedding patio boxes and outdoor planters.

A new petunia named Sunburst appears to be a lovely butter yellow grandiflora with which to make gorgeous summer color splashes.

Until now petunia colors have had only white to tone down the hot pinks, reds and rich purples. Now with this yellow, perhaps the sombrely mysterious blues and purples will become more appreciated.

A snapdragon with open-faced florets somewhat resembling the Butterfly-flower, schizanthus, is a winner being introduced this year.

The plants are 30 inches in height, branching from the base, and will continue in bloom until October if each stem is cut off as the flowers fade.

Bright Butterflies is the attractive name given this new snapdragon, for the color range includes red, bronze, pink, white, rose, yellow, scarlet and primrose.

A third new annual for this year appears among the cosmos, which is an ideal flower to hide fences or simply to furnish a background.

We have had the four to five-foot pink, red and white cosmos for years. These were followed by pink and red varieties of immense size, and then Orange Flare.

Now we are to see Sunset, a semi-double, two-inch diameter, burnt orange cosmos on bushy plants 30 inches in height.

I can imagine this being stunningly effective to give height to a flat bed of Blue Mantle petunias in full sun; or to fill small island beds set into a sunny patio.

Next week we'll take a peak at some new perennials.

Vote Muddle Cleared

INVERMERE (CP) — The matter of the ill-timed Invermere election appears to be settled. Successful commission candidate, Mrs. Ian Weir and Joseph Fuller, took their oaths of office and allegiance Monday night and it is not now expected that the village election will be further disputed.

2,700 Mothers Seek $45,000 For Disabled

Seeking $45,000 to help the disabled in the province, 2,700 mothers will march on Greater Victoria homes Jan. 31.

The mothers will knock on doors of homes and businesses between 4 and 7 p.m. Proceeds of the march will be used in a wide program of services.

Provincial honorary chief marching mother this year will again be Mrs. George Pearkes, wife of B.C.'s Lieutenant-Governor. Mrs. Pearkes has headed the marching mothers for four years.

Provincial goal is $275,000. The local group collected about $43,000 in 1964.

Among the services supported by the project:

- Victoria's Arbutus Crafts, 1119 Vancouver Street, where 45 handicapped manufacture baskets and furniture;
- A Vocational Services Centre in Vancouver with a clerical school and a supervised workshop, to which local handicapped are directed for training;
- Speech and hearing services in Vancouver and Victoria, which handle more than 2,500 persons annually;
- Medical rehabilitation and equipment including doctor bills, hospitalization and drugs, for 500 persons each year;
- Construction grants for provincial health centres and many related services.

Mothers wishing to volunteer their time for the end-of-month campaign should contact Rody Ryan at 388-5196.

Mac-Powell Appeal Bid Adjourned

A special court of revision here adjourned a multi-million-dollar appeal by MacMillan, Bloedel and Powell River Co. Tuesday so that a legal question could be solved at a Supreme Court trial in Vancouver Jan. 17.

The company will attack the validity of a provincial tax department assessment of $34,167,939 set on 39,000 acres purchased in the Esquimalt and Nanaimo Railway land belt area a year ago.

The assessment would result in a $8,541,984 bonus tax under a special act as well as $2 million in normal land taxes. It also would set the precedent for assessing another 180,000 acres involved in the sale.

The court of revision hearing was re-scheduled to Feb. 27, to follow the court case.

30,000 Protest Chemical Use

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Thirty thousand people have demonstrated in the Can Tho province of South Viet Nam in protest against the use of "toxic chemicals" by United States forces, the North Viet Nam News agency reported today.

The report said people of the province marched repeatedly to two district capitals to demand compensation from the Americans for damage to their property.

The agency said chemical spraying in Chau Thanh and O Mon districts had affected thousands of people and destroyed more than 20,000 acres of cron fields and gardens.

Constable 'Kicked Me First'

A man stopped for questioning on a city street appeared in central court Tuesday charged with assaulting a police officer.

Police said they stopped William Nelson, 1607 Camosun, early this morning on Queens Ave. to question him in connection with overnight break-ins.

Magistrate William Ostler accepted a not guilty plea from him after the charge of assaulting Constable Russell Redman was read.

"I'm guilty of that," said Nelson after the charge was read, "but he kicked me first."

Nelson then pulled up his shirt and showed the court a bruise on the right side of his chest.

"He kicked me in the crotch," he added.

"He said to the other officer there 'I figure we've got enough on him right now.' He had me around the neck and I couldn't speak," the accused man continued.

"This man is undefended. I am going to take a plea of not guilty," said Magistrate Ostler.

He remanded Nelson to Thursday for trial and set bail at $500.

STAY-AT-HOME BIRDS POSE PROBLEM

'Friends of the Ducks' Angry

CALGARY (CP) — Winter-loving ducks are creating a problem here, and an argument between duck-lovers and wildlife officials as to how to handle it.

The Friends of the Ducks Committee headed by John Gillespie, an industrial plant security guard, says thousands of ducks wintering on the Bow River are dying of starvation and cold.

Some birds have been frozen into the river ice and eaten alive by magpies because they were too cold and weak to seek food or protection, Mr. Gillespie says.

The committee contends the ducks should be fed.

Bob Webb, biologist with the Alberta fish and wildlife division, said Tuesday he doubted many were in danger of starving.

"I've been looking for dead birds and have seen only two." He estimated the number still in Calgary at 4,000, not the 6,000 the committee says are here.

Feeding the ducks, said Mr. Webb, will only encourage more to winter here, endangering air traffic at nearby McCall Airport and creating greater feed problems.

The stay-at-home syndrome reached a climax last winter, when Mr. Gillespie says his group fed 30,000.

Last fall federal and provincial governments exploded noisemakers to scare the ducks off the river. They also stopped feed at the Inglewood Bird Sanctuary and urged citizens not to feed them. Mr. Gillespie says his group and others complied with the request.

"Our sympathies are with the ducks too, but we're more interested in saving people from flocks endangering air traffic," Mr. Webb said.

He said more noisemakers will be used to boost the die-hards southward.

Russian Skating Champion Slain

MOSCOW (UPI) — World speedskating champion Inga Voronina has been knifed to death and her husband is under arrest in connection with the slaying, it was learned today.

Informed sources said Sergei Voronina, trainer of the Soviet skating team, was being held in the fatal stabbing of his 29-year-old wife, allegedly during a fight in their Moscow apartment.

Soviet officials confirmed Mrs. Voronina's death, but refused details.

Mrs. Voronina won the world speedskating championship four times, the first in 1957 and the last in 1965 at the world meet in Oulu, Finland. In 1962, she set four world records.

Illness prevented her from appearing in the Olympic Games, both in 1960 and 1964.

Victoria Daily Times

VICTORIA, B.C., WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 5, 1966—PAGE 21

Arthur Mayse

Among the people I pass the time of day with are several fairly recent immigrants from less-favored provinces on the wrong side of the Rockies. A mere couple of weeks ago, any mention of our Victoria climate to these fetched an automatic response:

"Sure, it's nice to get away from those Eastern winters. But we do get homesick for at least a little snow . . . it's so bracing."

Well, the snow has come, we've all had the heck braced out of us, and the prairie gophers are hoping even more fervently than we long-term Victorianos that the stuff will turn into honest West Coast rain.

As I sit here in wet shoes twittering out these lines, a return to normal seems imminent. Naturally, I refer to Victoria weather; over on the mainland, another slice of winter is cartwheeling north from Oregon to plaster luckless Vancouver.

That's what the prognosticators claim, but you can bet your snow tires that down in Oregon, they are blaming their weather on Canada as always!

★ ★ ★

Unlike certain lucky RCN units which are scampering toward Caribbean waters, we homebodies must remain on station to stand the dreariest watch of the year.

This extends through January and takes in nasty little February, a month for which I must extend myself to find a reasonable excuse.

It's usually a good time of year for steelhead fishermen, a super-hardy branch of the angler tribe whose joy it is to stand in cold water and colder air, casting for large, sullen trout with lines which frequently freeze in the rod rings.

Spring salmon are also waiting to be caught, this year in phenomenal numbers; but the sport is even chillier than steelheading. Unless he fishes from a pretty large boat, your salmon buff can't move around enough to circulate a glow. Also, a fire is denied him.

Even so, all around our perimeters, smallboat men slip out to play a cat-and-mouse game with the winter sea when and as they can.

In this contest, the sea is the cat, and it can flex its claws with cruel speed.

A good fisherman and boatman I know slipped his outboard rig in at Ten Mile during a late afternoon spell of relative calm. He had only an hour or so, and didn't really expect to hook anything.

He did though . . . a strong, wild winter spring, as the early twilight was settling.

Wind turned the water lumpy before his 24-pounder was in the boat. With the wind came whirling snow to blot the land from sight.

The fisherman ran in blind from Baynes Channel, pursued by cresting seas and with disaster threatening every foot of the way.

Luck and skill fetched him safe to Smuggler's Cove, but only just.

My own boat is hibernating under canvas on its trailer, and there it will sit till the happy day when our proper, mild Victoria winter returns.

My friend Freeman "Skipper" King has just trudged in from the sopping outdoors to shake the wet from his Cowichan sweater and report considerable blowdown in Francis Nature Park which he helped establish.

This bothers him not at all. He and the junior naturalists who work with him will clear the trails, but won't otherwise interfere with nature's cycle.

"We could use a little more sunlight in there, anyway," Skipper observes. "It will encourage new growth."

The Freeman F. King Scholarship Fund for Uvic students specializing in the natural sciences is still about $500 short of the $5,000 goal.

A one buck contribution from every man who scouted with Skipper as a boy—and gained lasting benefit therefrom—would double it.

Donations will be welcomed by fund custodian Dr. A. Chapman, care of the Provincial Museum.

West Wind to Blow Halt To Wintery Hullabaloo

By HUMPHRY DAVY

It's a wretched day but there may be some relief for Victorians plagued since Christmas with snow, sleet and ice.

And if normal weather does return soon, you can thank 100-year-old Jimmy Fraser, a famous Songhees Indian weather prophet, who through the years has made unofficial weather predictions.

An invalid at Postles Haven Rest Home, 976 Heywood, Jimmy agreed today to help bring an end to the inclement weather.

He summoned up his strange powers and consulted the west wind spirit mask of Ahoo-ya on ways and means of calling a halt to the messy weather.

According to Jimmy the snow and sleet is caused by a family quarrel between the North Wind spirit and his wife, South Wind. They parted hundreds of years ago. She moved to California to take up permanent residence.

The North Wind, who is pretty huffy about the whole affair, moves south from time to time to have a word with his wife.

And when they meet, you can imagine as Jimmy puts it, "what a hullabaloo there is in the heavens" . . . snow, sleet and ice are thrown about.

So it was decided, after Jimmy consulted the spirit, that Ahoo-ya will blow the two winds apart—the north to his northern abode, and the south back to California. The west wind will occupy the empty place. And what will that mean? Rain, and more rain . . . no more snow.

Solely in Interest Of Journalistic Honesty . . .

By PETE LOUDON

Warning: Anyone transmitting the following information to friends in the east may be subject to prosecution by the Victoria Visitors' Bureau.

But just between us true-blue Victorians there was no need to wear sun glasses last month.

If you spent eight hours a night in bed during December you must have been awake for 497 hours. And in all that time there was only 75.8 hours of bright sunshine, report the palefaces at Victoria City Weather Office.

The monthly bulletin, sent out in a plain wrapper with a bottle of cod liver oil, boasts that this sunny pittance was 10 hours more than our normal allotment.

Other soggy statistics:

We had 22 days with measurable precipitation (two days more than normal), 3.69 inches of rain and 14.5 inches of snow, which obviously was intended for Vancouver because this was 12.5 inches more than normal for the month. The weatherman slyly boiled that down to 4.9 inches of "precipitation." But we know the truth, don't we?

●

The ogres of Gonzales Hill also stated that the mean temperature (a fitting word) was 41.1 degrees—sort of a midway mark between our low of 29.5 degrees and our high of 55 degrees. If you were lying on the lawn, the grass minimum was 28 degrees.

The weather summary for the year also makes Arizona seem far away.

We had 25.45 inches of precipitation in 1965, 1.9 inches less than normal, far more than the record low of 16.01 set in 1952 and far less than the record high of 39.36 set in 1887—which must have been the year the ducks moved into Beacon Hill Park.

Our 1965 snows totalled 24.9 inches, 13.3 inches more than normal, but hardly anything compared to 1916 when 78.2 inches set a record. In 1881, 1889 and 1941 we had no measureable snow, the weathermen point out.

(Also plugged into the report, like sugar in the castor oil, is the fact that we had no precipitation at all in Victoria for three months of our recorded history—July 1958, August 1901 and July 1889).

But last year we had measureable dampness during 136 days. During the year's 5,840 waking hours we had 2,262.4 hours of bright sunshine, most tans coming from bottles or sun lamps. Record highest was 2,545.3 set in 1951 and record lowest, 1,947.7 set in 1914.

Sunniest month was July —358.5 hours, which was 27.8 hours more than normal. Least sunny was January with 49 hours, 21 hours less than usual.

Lowest temperature for the year was 29.5, Dec. 31. Highest was 90 degrees on July 31. Record highest for Victoria was 95.2 set in 1941; record lowest 6.5 degrees, set in 1950.

Except for the snow, it was probably an average year for Victoria. The report just catches us at a bad time. Issued in July and read in bright sunlight, we'd probably be bragging about it.

Jilted Youth Admits Choking, Kicking Attack

A bearded, 19-year-old Lake Cowichan youth who choked his ex-girl friend's boy friend, was remanded in custody until Jan. 13 when he appeared in central court this morning.

Thomas B. Tuck pleaded guilty to assault causing bodily harm and wilful damage. He was previously convicted of common assault in Lake Cowichan, court was told.

Detective Norman Baker said Tuck went to the girl's home late on the night of Dec. 21. He grabbed his victim by the tie and choked him into unconsciousness. Tuck then kicked the youth in the face and body.

Det. Baker said Tuck then threw stones at the youth's car, jumped on the trunk and roof and did $74 damage to the vehicle.

Sudbury Hits Heavy-Going On Home Stretch

The Victoria-based tug Sudbury II was plowing through heavy weather today on the final stretch of a 5,000-mile round trip.

The deep-sea tug is expected to arrive in Victoria Friday with the crippled Formosan freighter, Tainan, in tow.

Contract for surveying damage to the 10,000-ton freighter has been awarded Yarrows Ltd. The ship's tailshaft broke near the Aleutian Islands the week before Christmas.

After a two-week dash, Sudbury took over towing of the ship from a U.S. navy tug.

Clear weather speeded up the home run until today when she ran into rough weather 500 miles west of Victoria.

Up-Island Staggers Amid Fresh Snowfall

Several Areas Cut Off Again

Heavy snow falls north of the Malahat today virtually cut Vancouver Island in two.

Between three and six inches were dumped on most areas this morning.

And it was still coming down at press time.

Several areas were cut off as work crews struggled to keep pace with clogged highways.

Port Hardy on the Island's northeast tip and Tofino, on the west coast are unreachable except by heavy truck.

Even the major cities are having trouble keeping roads clear.

"It's never-ending," said a highways official. "As quick as we clear the roads they get covered with another coat of snow."

The Malahat was hit first thing today by a three-inch snowfall. Snowplows and sanders cleared a path through.

But it is impassable without good snow tires or chains.

Cowichan Lake School closed its doors for the second day running while classrooms the length of the Island were noticeably empty.

Rural Saanich schools opened this morning but students were sent home at the lunch hour because of transportation difficulties on the northern end of the peninsula.

Blizzards added to the hazard north of Campbell River.

10-FOOT DRIFTS

At Port Hardy drifts up to 10-feet deep were reported.

Victoria lived up to its "banana belt" reputation.

Rain began faillling this morning and the weatherman forecast more of the same for the next few days.

Temperatures will vary between 35 and 42—almost 10 degrees higher than the northern Island and Vancouver.

The forecast isn't so promising for other areas.

"GOOD DEAL MORE"

Weatherman William Mackie predicted a "good deal more snow" for the Island's east coast.

On the bright side, temperatures will rise to 32 overnight, 38 during the day in most regions as the Arctic front which caused the trouble is slowly pushed back.

Even before this morning's fall, Nanaimo airport reported 27 inches on the ground.

It was little better at Port Alberni with 21 inches and Comox with 16.

Despite the sudden weight of snow, hydro and telephone officials reported all well.

There are still some scattered calls to be answered in the Nanaimo area but no major breaks occurred.

Roads became treacherous in Victoria Tuesday night as a light snowfall froze over.

However, there were no major accidents and few minor ones.

The picture was the same Up-Island as many people were forced to leave their cars blocked in driveways and side streets.

Police advised snowtires and chains everywhere.

All roads north and west of Nanaimo have a covering of snow up to five inches in places.

The Toffino Road was buried under 12 inches first thing and was getting deeper every hour.

$100,000 IN OVERTIME

Meanwhile, B.C. Telephone Co. began to take stock of repair costs to date.

A company spokesman said $100,000 will be paid out in overtime alone to crews who worked non-stop through Christmas week.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said it will not be known for some time what the cost has been to them.

TOPICS of the DAY

A Prospective Foster Parents' meeting will be held Thursday, Jan. 13, at 8 p.m., and not Jan. 6 as previously announced.

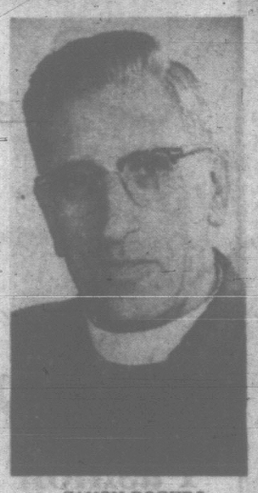
A suspended sentence was imposed today on William Fagan, 2828 Rita Road, who earlier pleaded guilty to common assault. Magistrate William Ostler placed him on $250 bond for six months.

Fagan was charged after assaulting his sister. The magistrate told him that "idleness combined with liquor causes this sort of thing."

A man pleaded guilty to contributing to juvenile delinquency was remanded today for pre-sentence and psychiatric report.

Ronald Starkey, 3933 Saanich Road, will be sentenced for the offence Jan. 13. The charge involved a 12-year-old girl.

St. Matthias Induction Sunday Night



CANON ROGERS
. . . leaves Royal Oak

Canon Jack Rogers will be inducted Sunday at 7:30 p.m. as rector of St. Matthias Anglican Church, 600 Richmond Road.

The induction service will be conducted by Archbishop Harold Sexton, Anglican primate of British Columbia.

Canon Rogers has been rector of St. Michael and All Angles Church, Royal Oak, for the past nine years. He is a graduate of St. John's College, Winnipeg, and was ordained in 1933.

He succeeds Rev. Angus Cameron of Lundavra who has been appointed Anglican chaplain at St. Joseph's Hospital and Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Rev. W. E. Greenhalgh, rector of St. Peter's Anglican Church, Quamichan, will be the new rector of St. Michael's and All Angels, Royal Oak.

Phone 'Joke' Means Jail For Party-goer

John Lamont, 876 Craigflower, was drinking at a house party on Harriet Road early on the morning of Dec. 12.

He decided "just as a joke" to call the telephone operator and tell her he was being held in the house aginst his will.

But Saanich police didn't appreciate the humor when they arrived on the scene after tracing the call. They charged him with misleading police.

And Magistrate William Ostler didn't think it was funny either when he heard the circumstances in central court this morning.

He said police cannot ignore such calls no matter how foolish they seem.

And he remanded Lamont in custody until Jan. 13 for a pre-sentence report.

MARGARET DAVY
. . . 'colorful, dramatic'

Girl's Work Chosen For Caravan

A dramatic water-color painting by a 13-year-old Victoria schoolgirl will be exhibited across Canada in 1967.

It is the work of Margaret Davy, a Grade VII student at Willows Elementary, and is the only entry from Greater Victoria public schools to be chosen for exhibit in a centennial caravan.

Margaret's painting, described as "colorful, dramatic and emotional," depicts the expulsion of the white settlers, the Acadians, from Nova Scotia in 1755.

It is one of 26 art works by British Columbia school children picked for inclusion in the cross-Canada exhibition.

They were chosen from 250 entries from B.C. schools by judges at the University of British Columbia and have now been forwarded to the Canadian Government Exhibition Commission in Ottawa for inclusion in the national art caravan.

Schools throughout B.C. were invited to submit five or six paintings or drawings by children in Grades 6, 7 and 8. They were given the choice of seven subjects depicting The Causes of Confederation.

Margaret is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Humphry Davy, 2762 Heron Street.

GALLERY STUDENT

Margaret who has been a student at Willows Elementary since 1958, celebrated her 13th birthday on New Year's Day. She became interested in painting after being taken by her parents to Greater Victoria Art Gallery at the age of seven.

Since then she has been a regular student at the art classes provided for school children at Greater Victoria Art Gallery.

10,000 IDLED BY SNOW

About 10,000 loggers are out of work in coastal British Columbia because of snow.

A spokesman for the International Woodworkers of America said some of the camps were to reopen htis week after the annual Christmas-New Year's shutdown for mainfenance repairs, but the weather has cancelled this.

Fred Fieber, IWA regional secretary-treasurer, said of the 10,000 men involved, about 2,500 are on Vancouver Island. The snow has hit 200 loggers on the southern end of the island.

NO PAY

Until they return to work, loggers don't get paid but if they are eligible they can claim unemployment insurance.

Mr. Fieber said the last two winters have been unusual because of the heavy snow in the latter part of December.

Re-opening of the camps will depend on the weather and the altitude of the operation.

Some low-lying camps are often unaffected, but those at the 3,000 to 4,000 foot level often are closed until March.

On Vancouver Island, one company — Crown Zellerbach — postponed re-opening until next week. About 860 men are involved.

New Minister To Discuss Nematodes

Canada's new federal Agriculture Minister Joseph Greene will make a side-trip here Monday to discuss the golden nematode situation on Saanich Peninsula.

It will be part of a week-long western tour by Mr. Greene to look up provincial agriculture ministers and receive briefings on local problems such as the nematode infestation here, it was revealed today in Ottawa.

The tour starts Sunday when Mr. Greene flies from Ottawa to Penticton to meet B.C. Agriculture Minister Frank Richter in his hometown.

The two ministers also will see representatives of the fruit industry to discuss the recently-inaugurated joint program of rehabilitating grape and tree-fruit growers who were severely hit by a 1964 cold snap that caused millions of dollars damage to orchards.

Hospitals Handled 900 More Patients

The rush on acute hospital beds in Victoria last year saw almost 900 more patients accommodated than in the previous year.

But where Royal Jubilee Hospital had almost 1,000 more admissions, St. Joseph's had about 100 less.

The two hospitals combined cared for 30,634 patients during 1965 compared to 29,768 in 1964.

At Royal Jubilee, administrator George Masters said Jubilee admissions in 1965 were 16,788 compared to 15,826 — an actual increase of 962.

BIRTHS CONTROLLED

This 6 per cent increase came during a year when maternity cases were reduced — largely because of new birth control techniques, authorities believe.

The hospital had 1,794 new babies in 1964 but this total dropped to 1,661 last year — a drop of 133.

"We had no more beds than before, but we had a faster turnover," said Mr. Masters, who has been coping for months with a waiting list for elective surgery of several hundred. It is estimated 1,600 people are waiting for admissions to Royal Jubilee or St. Joseph's at present.

The bed shortage also contributed to development of a new policy of surgical operations for outpatients, last year at Royal Jubilee.

HOME TO RECOVER

Last year 1,000 outpatients came to Jubilee for stays as short as six hours for minor surgery, then were sent home to recuperate.

At St. Joseph's in 1963 there were 13,846 admissions compared to 13,942 in 1964. Maternity cases dropped from 1,450 in 1964 to 1,312. Occupancy of total hospital beds was 81 per cent.

The emergency department at St. Jospeh's was busier last year than in the year previous by 1,418 cases. During the year there were 16,711 patients brought to emergency. But only 2,248 were required to remain in hospital after initial treatment.

During 1965 there were 617 people taken to emergency at St. Jospeh's following traffic accidents — 29 less than in 1964. Last month 1,346 people were treated in emergency, 89 of whom were traffic victims.

DEAR ABBY . . .

She Was Roped In!

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two years ago my neighbor asked if she could hang a few sheets on my clothesline. I said all right. Then she started hanging all sorts of colored garments, rugs, blankets, etc., on my line. She will not put up a clothesline in HER yard because she doesn't want it cluttered. Occasionally, I didn't mind, but now it has become an everyday occurrence. I don't want to take down my line because I need it for my own use. She's added two lines of her own to my pole so now she feels that she can use HER lines anytime. I am very much upset over this. It's caused many family arguments because my husband will not tell them it's annoying. We don't want hard feelings. Please tell me how to discourage this practice?

HAVE HAD IT

DEAR HAVE HAD IT: Remind your neighbor that she asked permission to hang a "few sheets" on your line, and you think she's gone a bit too far. Face it. You are really upset with yourself for lacking the backbone to set your neighbor straight. Don't blame your husband for refusing to run interference for you. That's not HIS line!

DEAR ABBY: Maybe I shouldn't complain because my fiance says he loves me a lot and I know he never looks at another girl, but here's my problem. Now that deer hunting season is here he says he'll see me after the season is over. He is so crazy about hunting, he goes every minute he has off from work. Abby, everyone says I'm a fool to wait for him to come to see me when he feels like it. I think if he really cared for me he'd see me on week-ends during the deer season, don't you? Should I tell him he can either find time for me or he can find someone else?

SECOND CHOICE

DEAR SECOND: If you're sure the only kind of deer your fiance is interested in is the four-legged kind, you're lucky. Don't challenge him to find another "dear" unless you want to go hunting for a new boy friend.

DEAR ABBY: In a recent article, you said the boy's mother should set up restrictions in the absence of the girl's mother doing so. We had the same situation a few years ago. Our son, at 17, was going steady with an 18-year-old girl. He, too, practically "lived" at her house. We tried everything we could think of to keep them from seeing so much of each other. We talked to our son. We limited the use of our car. But the girl used her mother's car, so that didn't work. In desperation I phoned the girl's mother and begged her not to let our son come over so much. I told her he had a lot of school left and would be in no position to marry for several years. All to no avail. The girl's mother said they were "good kids," she "trusted" them, and they were "in love."

Well, a few months after our son turned 18 he informed us that the girl was pregnant. Our son is now 20. His education is finished as he had to get a job at 18 to support a family. They have two children now and they are miserable. His wife is a sloppy housekeeper. The only time the floor gets scrubbed is when he does it. He has to take care of the babies when he gets home from work at night. She complains that there isn't enough money and they don't have a decent car, etc. I blame early dating, going steady, AND the girl's parents.

GRIEVING MOTHER.

EXPANDING TO OTHER COUNTRIES

Industry for Handicapped People

TORONTO (CP) — A woman who founded and directs an industry aimed at helping homebound handicapped persons support themselves plans a trip to New York City this week as the first move in an effort to extend her operations to other countries.

Mrs. George C. Marshall of Toronto started Marina Creations in 1955 under the sponsorship of the Canadian Society for Crippled Civilians.

It sells articles made at home by handicapped persons. The enterprise supplies raw materials and patterns and uses volunteer workers to collect finished items.

Mrs. Marshall said Monday she will meet U.S. federal government and New York and Connecticut state representatives to discuss extending the industry into the U.S.

Marina Creations, which has annual sales in Canada of about $50,000, now has branches in Edmonton, Regina, Saskatoon, Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., London, Ont., and Toronto. Mrs. Marshall said enquiries have been received from Montreal, Halifax and Winnipeg.

WHY GROW OLD?

By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

During Middle Age Take Intelligent Look at Yourself

This week I am bringing you a few old thoughts for the New Year. I hope that some may amuse you and others give you food for thought.

Lowman

Someone once said, "Middle age is when you begin eating what is good for you instead of what you like." I thought they had done away with middle age and that only youth and older age remain. According to that definition, there are a lot of 30-year-olds who are middle-aged and many 60-year-olds who have not yet arrived at that point.

This reinforces the belief of the experts that it is ridiculous to measure age and physical condition and mental outlook by the number of years a person has lived. Individuals differ so greatly in these matters.

However, so-called middle age is a time when folks are apt to stop, look, listen and weigh their lives. It is a time when they may look back and wonder what happened to their plans, their dreams, their ambitions and happiness.

It is a time when that extra measure of youthful vigor may be limping a bit and the neglect of health and beauty care of past years begins catching up a bit. This is a time when physical weaknesses and the results of negative thinking may show up.

This midpoint is a good time to take stock. There is still time to apply corrective measures to the first signs of disease, to make the necessary changes in diet and in habits of life. Many of those who have lived to a great old age, found that they had some organic or systemic weakness and then nursed it along for the rest of their lives.

It is a fine time to decide whether or not your life is moving in the direction you wish. People of this age are still young enough to make changes in their attitudes and situations which will lead to greater satisfaction.

This really isn't a time when you must eat only what is good for you but you may find that some changes are in order and profit by them. Take advantage of what is known about the tremendous value of regular exercise, about the impact of good nutrition and have a positive, happy attitude on vibrant living.

Middle age is a time when we should take stock but in an intelligent way rather than an age-conscious way.

If you would like to have my leaflet "Pep," send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Josephine Lowman in care of this newspaper.

SHOPPING GUIDE

Sports-Minded Ladies —These Are for You

By Penny Saver

Women with a flair for sports, either indoor or outdoor, need a type of ensemble that is comfortable, roomy, and one that will last. Thinking of the bowler in particular, tight-fitting pants can be very hazardous . . . embarrassing, to say the least! When engaged in any type of activity, comfortable clothing is of the essence, so that you can enjoy what you are doing.

When I look for a garment to wear as a sports outfit, I try to choose something that can serve more than just this purpose.

When I was browsing in one shop, I found the perfect skirt to suit my requirements. It is made of imported wool from Scotland, hand-woven in New Brunswick. Each skirt is gored, which means that it is made of cut pieces of material sewn together. About 30 such panels comprise each skirt. Because of this gored effect, the skirt never loses its pleats.

These range in price from $18 to $30. There is a large variety of colors to choose from. Some feature delicate metallic embroidery, which further enhances their attractiveness.

Sweaters are a boon to any girl's wardrobe. I found some lovely bulky-knits, selling for just $8.98. These feature that cosy turtle neck, which helps ward off the biting cold. They have long sleeves, but do not have a ribbed finish. This gives a very different look to the whole sweater. Colors include wine, black and blue.

Selling for $6.98 are shoulder-wraps, made of imported wool from Scotland. These are ideal for throwing over your shoulders as you dash madly to your neighbors for the morning coffee.

Top any winter outfit with a saucy little beret, with warm, woollen sidepieces that cover the ears and tie under the chin. These berets are made of laminated fabric, and come in shades of red, navy blue, and sky blue. They sell for $3.98.

TODAY'S RECIPE

ORANGE CINNAMON BUBBLE LOAF

Half cup milk, ¼ cup granulated sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 tablespoon orange rind, 1 envelope fast-rising active dry yeast, ½ cup lukewarm water, 1 teaspoon granulated sugar, 1 egg, well-beaten, 2 tablespoons soft shortening, 3 cups (about) pre-sifted all-purpose flour, ⅓ cup granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon grated orange rind, ½ teaspoon cinnamon, 2 tablespoons melted butter.

Scald milk; add sugar, salt and one tablespoon orange rind. Stir until dissolved. Cool to lukewarm.

Meanwhile, measure lukewarm water into bowl; stir in one teaspoon sugar. Sprinkle with yeast. Let stand 10 minutes, then stir well.

Stir in lukewarm milk mixture, beaten egg, shortening and 2 cups of the flour. Add enough additional flour until dough begins to leave the sides of the bowl — about one cup more. Turn out dough and knead until smooth and elastic. Place in greased bowl, grease top. Cover. Let rise 50 to 60 minutes in a warm place, free from draft.

Punch down dough, turn out on lightly-floured board, cover with a towel and let rest 10 minutes.

Meantime, combine the ⅓ cup sugar, 1 tablespoon orange rind, cinnamon and melted butter.

Divide dough in half. Shape each into a 15-inch roll. Cut into 15, 1-inch pieces. Roll in ball shape with fingers and line a greased 8½ x 4½-inch loaf pan with 10 balls. Sprinkle one-quarter of the cinnamon mixture over top. Cover centre with 5 remaining balls. Sprinkle with one-quarter of cinnamon mixture. Repeat with other half of dough.

Cover and let rise as before for about 45 minutes. Bake in preheated moderate oven (350 deg. F.) for 30 to 35 minutes.

TWELFTH NIGHT

The BIG Clean-Up For GOOD LUCK

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Seated around the dining room table in a friend's home the other evening (picking turkey bones and eating left-overs from the New Year's Day feast), the talk turned lazily to the length of time Yuletide decorations should be left in place.

Forbes

"I like them out of the way as soon as the new year is in," said our hostess, with a determined nod of her head.

She was telling the truth. As we looked around the only things that reminded us of the festive season was an arrangement of holly in the centre of the table and a ceramic Santa and reindeer above the fireplace.

"That would be put away, too," said the daughter of the house, "only mother didn't have time to pack it properly."

Just then, a guest chipped in with the information that she liked to leave her decorations up until the holly begins to turn brown and the needles start dropping from the cedar boughs.

★ ★ ★

"You'd better throw them out before Twelfth Night, if you want good luck in 1966, said the sentimentalist among us.

There was a sudden silence. Then the youngest in the group grinned. "Surely you don't believe in that nonsense," is what she said.

Nonsense it may be but I'll wager there's been a grand clean-up in many homes today as housewives took down the last of the holiday greens — the tree, the cedar boughs, the pine cones and the holly.

In the next 24 hours there will be a further sweeping up of pine needles, putting of decorations away, airing out of rooms and getting rid of every speck of dust.

In some cases, greeting card lists will even be made for another year and the cards themselves will either be given away or burned.

★ ★ ★

For Thursday brings Twelfth Night! And no one who has a speck of superstition (perhaps I should call it imagination) in their make-up will have Yuletide decorations of any sort in their rooms after the stroke of 12 tomorrow night.

As a good omen for the days ahead, everything must also be shining and clean. No grime or dust left over from the old year.

The superstition includes the burning of the tree, the cedar boughs and the holly, if possible, to bring luck into the home.

January six is the twelfth night after Christmas. Twelfthtide it is sometimes called.

Actually it is the Eve of Epiphany.

In some churches it heralds a religeous festival that commemorates the visit of the Magi of the East of Bethlehem, to see and worship the child Jesus.

★ ★ ★

The others of the festival marks the appearance of the star to the Magi and symbolizes the manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles.

The word Epiphany itself means "an appearance."

How or why have embodied it in a traditional ceremony of our own, no one around the dining table in our friend's home the other night could say.

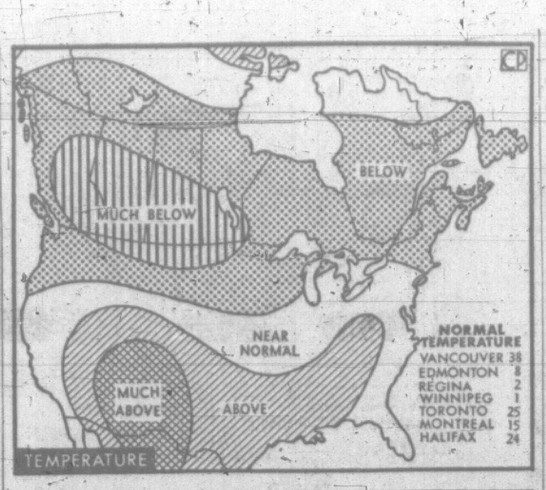
"It goes away back into the past," said our hostess.

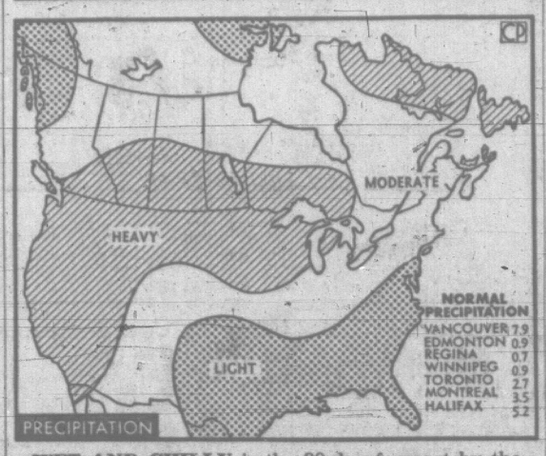
Perhaps the significance is in having our homes clean and trim to meet the good that must surely come our way in days ahead," said a guest.

The sentimentalist insisted it was "for luck"; the youngest in the group murmured "superstition. superstition".

However, now that the time has come, we've all conformed to custom and cleaned house for this year of 1966.

Thursday brings Twelfth Night!





WET AND CHILLY is the 30-day forecast by the U.S. Weather Bureau for southern Vancouver Island. The Interior can expect much below normal temperatures and the only area in Canada in the "near-normal" range is southern Ontario.

Special Course To Be Offered Family Doctors

TORONTO (CP) — Medical schools in Calgary and London, Ont., will offer North America's first formal three-year, post-graduate courses in general practice next summer.

The College of General Practice of Canada announced Tuesday candidates now are being selected to take the courses at the University of Western Ontario and the University of Alberta.

Dr. John B. Corley, director of the Calgary course, said seven of the 10 places in the residency program there have been awarded to students from the four medical schools in Western Canada—the Universities of Alberta, Manitoba, Saskatchewan and British Columbia.

BEGINS JULY 1

The course begins at Calgary General Hospital July 1.

Dalhousie University medical school in Halifax has been studying a similar program for general practitioners for some time but no decision has yet been reached.

The University of Western Ontario hopes to expand the program to make an extra two-year program leading to the same certificate available to graduates who have already done a year's rotating internship.

A general practitioner now may set up practice after graduation from medical school and one year of rotating internship in an accepted hospital.

INTEGRATED

The new courses at London and Calgary are integrated three-year courses taking in the mandatory one year internship.

Students in the Calgary course will also be taught by specialists and general practitioners and will receive experience in home and office calls as well as hospital work. In their final year, they will be assigned to a rural hospital for a month and will take over a family doctor's practice for another month, freeing him for a period of refresher study.

The new programs reflect the views of the College of General Practice that a family doctor needs as much training as a specialist.

Airman Sucked Out Of Plane's Window

WHITTIER, Calif. (UPI)—The harrowing story of a young air force lieutenant who was partially sucked from a jet airtanker travelling at 600 miles an hour 35,000 feet over Greenland was disclosed last week by his father.

The temperature outside the KC35 tanker was estimated at 100 degrees below zero when the incident occurred three weeks ago, according to the father, Roland Beck of Whittier.

IN GOOD SHAPE

The son, Lt. Bradley Beck, 24, was reported in good condition at Lackland Air Force Base in San Antonio, Tex., where he is recovering from severe frostbite.

The plane, a military version of the Boeing 707, had just completed an inflight refueling over Greenland and was returning to the Fairbanks, Ala., air force base when the window to Beck's right cracked, the father said.

WINDOW RIPS OUT

Beck yelled a warning to the other three members of the crew, grabbed his helmet and had just gotten it on when the window exploded outward, creating a tremendous pressure within the plane, his father said.

Beck said that as he was sucked out by the pressure he felt his seat belt slip, then hold, leaving him dangling head and shoulders outside the plane.

The pilot immediately reduced the plane's speed from 600 miles an hour and gradually brought it to a lower altitude while the navigator grabbed Beck's legs and pulled him from the window, according to the father.

The plane landed at Thule Air Force Base in Greenland, the nearest base with hospital facilities.

The elder Beck said his son was in "tough shape" for a while with severe frostbite of the face, neck and hands.

According to the father, even Beck's trachea was frostbitten making it impossible to speak for several days.

After two weeks of treatment at Thule, the lieutenant was flown to Lackland, where hospital authorities said one of his hands was in good shape but the other had not responded as well. However, they said there was no thought of amputation.

SECT MEMBER

'Started Paying His Debt'

VANCOUVER (CP)—Marvin Hafley, 30, of neighboring North Vancouver has started paying a debt to the United States that has been on his conscience since 1959.

Hafley, a member of the Jehovah's Witnesses sect, was sentenced to not more than a year in prison in Seattle Monday for failing to follow a draft board order.

His wife, Marion, 30, told his story in an interview Tuesday:

They settled in St. Louis where Hafley was considered by the draft board as a conscientious objector because of his religion which forbids killing.

The draft board ordered him to work in a Kansas City hospital.

$20 A WEEK

"He did not want to compromise. At the time, he was only earning $20 a week and I was pregnant. I couldn't get a job if he had to leave home, so we decided to ignore the order and come to Canada."

Hafley became a Canadian citizen.

But ignoring the order was on his conscience. The couple wanted their daughter, Elaine, now 6, to be in school before he did anything about it.

The FBI contacted Hafley last month and he went to Seattle to answer the indictment against him. Mrs. Hafley said authorities told them Hafley will probably only serve about three or four months.

GIRL BETTER

Youngsters Still in Coma After Crash

A son and daughter of a Victoria family injured in a car accident Dec. 22 are still in critical condition in an Oregon hospital but the girl shows a slight improvement.

Christopher Baker, 10, and Susan Baker, 13, children of Wing Commander and Mrs. James Baker, 3034 Westdowne, are still unconscious at Rogue Valley Hospital, Medford, Ore.

Wing Cmdr. Baker, a surgeon at Naden Hospital, was uninjured in the accident. His wife and their two other daughters have been discharged from hospital. Their car overturned on an icy road while they were en route to San Francisco for a holiday.

RESIDENTS HELP

Residents of the area around the hospital, who read of the Bakers' plight, tried to help them celebrate Christmas.

Wing Cmdr. Baker said "more than 100 persons—total strangers—visited us in hospital. They came to bring Christmas greetings. He described Medford as "this wonderful, Christian community."

A local boy even found the Bakers' dog that was lost after the accident. He brought the dog to hospital and it is now with the Bakers who are staying on in Medford.

Relatives of the Baker family, with whom they were going to stay in San Francisco, drove up to Medford to spend the Christmas season with them.

'Yankee Imperialism Number One Enemy'

By MICHAEL ARKUS

HAVANA (Reuters)—Part of a U.S. plane downed by Laotian Communists formed part of the archives of the tri-continental anti-imperialist conference today following blistering attacks by delegates on U.S. world policy.

Speaker after speaker, representing countries in Asia, Africa and Latin America, mounted the rostrum on the second day of the conference Tuesday to blast "Yankee imperialism, the number one enemy of our peoples."

The attacks ranged from Viet Nam to The Congo and from the Dominican Republic to Palestine.

So numerous were the charges levelled against "Yankee imperialism" that the speakers overran their alloted time. The conference president, Cuban Foreign Minister Raul Rao, repeatedly called them to order to keep to the 20-minute limit.

The speakers called on the non-governmental conference, which has brought together delegates from Communist and revolutionary parties and guerrilla movements in three continents, to establish unity of action in the face of the "worst criminal of our era."

As a symbol of their struggle, the delegate of the South Vietnamese National Liberation Front, the political arm of the Viet Cong guerrillas, presented the conference with a weapon made by the Viet Cong.

PRESENTS PLANE PART

The Laotian delegate presented a piece of a U.S. plane shot down by pro-Communist Pathet Lao forces.

The Viet Cong delegate joined the North Vietnamese representative in calling on the conference to condemn the U.S. as a war criminal.

Both delegates made a distinction between the U.S. government and the American people, whom they said supported the Vietnamese cause.

They accused President Johnson of "two faced policy proposing unconditional negotiations on the one hand and stepping up his invasion forces on the other."

The two delegates also attacked "U.S. imperialism" in Laos, Cambodia, North Borneo, Santo Domingo, the Panama Canal and The Congo.

Cayetano Armando Rodriguez, of the Dominican Republic, told the conference:

"Our country took Cuba as an example for our revolution—we will never cease to denounce the crime of North American imperialism and we will fight even more intensely."

Palestinian delegate Ibrahim Abu Sitta called on the conference to pass a resolution "condemning Israel as a base of U.S. imperialism and exhorting all progressive forces and countries to sever all political, economic and cultural relations with Israel."

LOCAL BRIEFS

Two provincial government departments should cross the threshold of their new quarters in the former liquor warehouse here about mid-summer.

Public Works Minister W. N. Chant said Tuesday a contract will be awarded in a few weeks, after tenders are obtained, for renovation of the interior of the building at Fort and Wharf Street. It was vacated last fall by the Liquor Control Board.

Recreation and Conservation Department branches, now scattered in a variety of locations, and the Municipal Affairs Department offices will be brought together under one roof in the building.

Charles C. Ogilvie, 425 Wilson, was fined $125 in central court Tuesday when he pleaded guilty to driving while suspended.

Court was told he was involved in a minor accident Monday at Blanshard and Johnson Streets.

Advance tax payments totalled $50,000 at city hall Monday, a drop from the $77,000 paid on the first working day of 1965.

City officials were not perturbed by the $23,000 drop.

James Bramley, city comptroller, said bad weather had probably kept a good percentage of citizens seeking the four per cent discount for pre-paid taxes at home.

Evil Spirit Gone; Eskimo Woman Shot

By STUART LAKE

OTTAWA (CP)—Poor flying weather has prevented the RCMP from completing its investigation into the shooting death of an Eskimo woman at Fort Ross, on the Boothia Peninsula of the Northwest Territories.

A preliminary investigation has disclosed that 40-year-old Soosee was killed because other Eskimos believed she was possessed by evil spirits.

Soosee, who had been treated for mental illness, travelled and hunted with three families near Fort Ross, a Hudson's Bay Company trading post established in 1937 but abandoned five years later because of difficulties in bringing in company supplies.

NEPHEW CHARGED

Eskimos in the area live off the land. They stay in tents during the summer and snowhouses in the winter.

Informants say that Soosee was creating a disturbance in Fort Ross last summer, throwing stones and damaging tents.

The three families then called a meeting at which it was decided that evil spirits possessed her and that she would have to be shot.

Police in Spence Bay, some 200 miles north of Fort Ross, learned of her death two months later and flew into the area in September. They had to take off a short time later because ice conditions threatened to trap them in Fort Ross for several months.

SNOWHOUSES

Isachee Shooyook, 20, a nephew of the dead woman, has been charged with capital murder. He appeared in a Yellowknife court Oct. 18 and later was released to continue hunting until his case comes to trial.

The death of Soosee recalls the slaying of nine persons in the Belcher Islands in the winter of 1941.

A group of five Eskimos, interpreting the New Testament to mean that they were divine, killed nine other Eskimos who doubted their divinity.

The five Eskimos were sentenced to two years in jail when the "Belcher Islands massacre" case went to trial.

Explosive Cargo Secured

HOLYHEAD, Wales (Reuters) — The crew of a Dutch coaster wallowing in the gale-lashed Irish Sea battled for two hours early today to secure a shifting cargo of drums containing highly explosive chemicals.

The drums, stored as deck cargo aboard the 499-ton vessel Ingkabir, bound from Liverpool to Cork, began to move when the coaster was about 20 miles southwest of the Isle of Anglesay.

Holyhead coast guards and lifeboats were alerted after the ship sent out urgent distress signals saying: "Dangerous deck cargo on the move — all ships keep clear — danger of explosion."

But the Ingkabir cancelled her distress message two hours later and said the deck cargo had been secured.

Charge Improperly Laid

An improperly laid charge resulted in acquittal for a man in central court Tuesday.

William A. Brown, address unavailable, was charged with "unlawfully" obstructing police officer Donald Milton Dec. 10 at the Drake Hotel, 536 Johnson St.

Magistrate William Ostler and defence counsel Dermond Owen-Flood noted the charge should have read "wilfully" obstructed.

"I hadn't noticed that," commented prosecutor Peter Birkett.

He had earlier amended the charge to read "on or about" Dec. 10 because of confusion of the time of the alleged offence.

DISPUTE

Court was told Brown became involved in a dispute with beer parlor proprietor Baxter Bennett and Constable Milton was investigating.

Const. Milton testified Brown told him he had been assaulted by Mr. Bennett and he had placed him under citizen's arrest.

While the constable was explaining the citizen's arrest procedure, Brown told them he was placing them all under arrest, court was told.

Then while the officer was taking names, Brown hit him on the back "with his arm and forearm in a manner to gain my attention."

He grabbed his hand while he was writing, he added.

At one point in the trial, Magistrate Ostler said he did not understand "why the constable didn't just say 'just go along,' to the man."

The prosecution failed to state why Brown was arrested, he said.

Children Panic

EMERGENCY SUPPLIES

Nanaimo to Get Medical Cache

NANAIMO — The Hub City will become the second "outpost" on Vancouver Island for the storage of emergency medical supplies.

Provincial civil defence officials Tuesday confirmed that the federal government plans to store the supplies in a former army ammunition dump on the outskirts of Harewood.

A few of the buildings, constructed during the Second World War, are being used as a general storage depot for the Nanaimo army camp.

The supplies, which would be used only in a major disaster, will be under control of provincial civil defence officials.

Another federal government emergency depot is at Jordan River on the west coast of the Island.

Stored there in 50 crates is all the material needed to set up a 200-bed hospital which includes three operating rooms, a pharmacy and an X-ray room.

4,200 Return To Classrooms

DUNCAN — Some 4,200 students went back to school in the Cowichan school district today after a one-day break on Tuesday.

But at Ladysmith and Lake Cowichan the schools have not reopened since the Christmas holidays.

Ladysmith board secretary R. W. Ovenden said "for safety reasons we are keeping the schools closed.

"Some 1,970 students are home. There is ice under the snow on the steep hills the school buses have to negotiate, and no highway sidewalks for the youngsters to walk on."

The story is the same at Lake Cowichan, where 1,600 students are involved.

FEW FAILURES

Power failures are few as the storm continues.

But again suffering are the residents on the west arm of Shawnigan Lake and along the Port Renfrew Road.

A Victoria crew was dispatched to the area this morning to help in repair work.

B.C. Hydro also reported trouble at Honeymoon Bay and Cayeuse.

B.C. Telephone Company spokesman Jim Hawthornthwaite said "Our troubles are only a little bit more than normal.

"Only about 35 subscribers are without service."

Basic Services Come First Says New Reeve

Establishment of basic services is the most important task facing the first elected North Saanich council, Reeve James Cumming said Monday.

"Our initial effort must be based on setting our house in order," the reeve said.

"Speed laws, procedural by-laws, animal control, nusiance bylaws, licenceing and many other matters will have to be processed by council."

Roads are the only present public works concern in North Saanich, he said.

Provincial highways department has undertaken to maintain all roads in the municipality for the first three months of 1966.

After that the municipality will likely continue the arrangement until equipment is purchased.

The fire and ambulance service will continue with North Saanich and Sidney sharing the cost.

Reeve Cumming noted the fire committee is considering the establishment of a branch firehall in Deep Cove area.

Council members sworn in Monday were Mrs. Nell North, Trevor Davis, J. Harold Wilson, John S. Clark, Douglas R. Cook and George Aylard, and the reeve.

25 PIGS PERISH

MILL BAY—Twenty-five pigs, many of them newly-born, died at the Craven Farm here as a result of a bad-weather power failure last week, said farm officials.

A farm spokesman said several factors contributed to the deaths, including lack of warmth for the new-born and severe overcrowding at the water outlets during time when power was on and water being pumped.

Two of the pigs lost were market size, several weighed about 100 pounds and the rest were newly-born.

Everything in the show will be the newest, most sophisticated model of its kind, representing the latest answers to the needs of the logging industry.

★ ★ ★

Inside displays will be about the same as last year, but outside exhibits will require over twice the area occupied in 1965.

Every square foot of available space around the Bayshore is being pressed into service. Even the hotel swimming pool has again been expropriated for a special display.

All told, the show, comprising some 33 pieces of heavy equipment and 40 inside booths, will cover a total area of 50,000 square feet.

★ ★ ★

Overall value of the spread will run close to $2,000,000.

Display committee chairman Peter Bingham says interest in the equipment show has run higher than in any previous year.

He notes that there are some types of equipment being shown this year that most people will likely be seeing for the first time.

★ ★ ★

A number of new items will be shown that were designed specifically to meet the needs that have emerged in small-wood logging.

Mr. Bingham says that around 20 per cent of this year's show will feature equipment more or less related to smallwood logging use.

Union Rejects Plea

Resume Service, Asks N.Y. Mayor

NEW YORK (AP) — Union negotiators promptly rejected Mayor John V. Lindsay's plea today for resumption of subway and bus service while labor contract negotiations continue.

Lindsay entered the strike talks on the fifth day of a city-wide transportation paralysis which started the day he took office.

The rejection of his plan came from the second line of union negotiators, now handling the bargaining for the nine officers of two striking unions who were jailed for calling the strike.

Still another court session was scheduled for the afternoon concerning the possibility of levying fines against the officers and the unions.

UNION ADAMANT

Emerging from a session with Lindsay, the mayor's first intervention since being sworn in, a union spokesman said: "No contract no work."

Lindsay's press aide said the mayor intended to stay with the talks until an agreement for service is worked out.

Lindsay had said that if his presence was needed at the talks, the parties would have to come to city hall. Instead, at the call of his three-man mediation panel, he went to the negotiations at the Americana Hotel.

URGE STAGGERED HOURS

Meantime, the morning work rush began to abate. Traffic Commissioner Henry A. Barnes, overseeing the flow, said drivers apparently got an earlier start today.

In an effort to ease the more clogged evening travel rush, the city recommended that businesses in lower Manhattan voluntarily stagger work hours.

"By spreading the peak over a longer period it relieves the pressure," Barnes said. "We'll be able to cope with it."

The bargaining talks were thrown into a turmoil Tuesday by the jailing and collapse of union leader Michael J. Quill. He and eight other officers of two striking unions were arrested on the order of a judge who found them in contempt for ignoring a court order forbidding the strike.

But two hours after entering jail, Quill, a 60-year-old heart patient, collapsed.

QUILL IMPROVED

A Bellevue Hospital spokesman said this morning that Quill "looks improved, his color is back and he's more like himself." The spokesman said specialists still were studying tests to determine whether he had suffered a heart attack.

Adding another dimension to the crisis is the threat that a major commuter lifeline, the Long Island Rail Road, may be halted.

The traffic department estimated at 6 a.m. that the number of cars headed for Manhattan was double the number of Tuesday, which in turn had been twice that of Monday.

Barnes said apparently economic pressures were forcing people to return to work as the strike lengthens.

Lepage was remanded to Jan. 12 for mental examination during a brief appearance in court.

UN Members Get Peace Aid Call

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The United States today invited members of the United Nations to do whatever they believe might contribute to peace in Viet Nam.

U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg delivered for circulation as a security council document a brief report on the world-wide peace offensive launched by President Johnson during Christmas week when a lull was ordered in U.S. bombing of North Viet Nam.

Goldberg then told a news conference that the peace offensive was not a "propaganda exercise" and that no "ultimatum" to the Communists was intended.

He pointed out in his report to the United Nations that the bombing of North Vjet Nam has not been resumed since the Christmas truce.

PAUSE TO END

Asked whether this meant the bombing pause would continue or might end soon, Goldberg said of the statement in his letter:

"This is a present fact."

The letter asked all UN members to give "more urgent thought" to the search for a formula to end the Viet Nam war.

He said the U.S. was ready to enter into unconditional negotiations if the government in Hanoi wanted to do so.

The report, Goldberg said, included a summary of the essential points made by President Johnson's emissaries in visits to many capitals on both sides of the iron curtain.

LONG AND INVOLVED

"Mainly, our conversations with heads of state were long and involved," he said, adding he would not divulge the content of any talks except the note from Pope Paul VI to Johnson whose publication was authorized by the pontiff.

Goldberg said the Soviet Union —not visited by any of the Johnson peace envoys—had been advised of "the essential character of what is going on."

Asked if Washington had received any indication from any source, despite its public ridicule of the peace offensive, that Hanoi might be willing to enter peace negotiations, Goldberg said: "We are going to continue these efforts."

Goldberg said Thant was the first to be advised of the peace offensive.

Ship Fire Controlled In Atlantic

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. Lines cargo ship laden with paint and rubber caught fire on a rain-swept Atlantic today, but the U.S. Coast Guard said later the blaze has been controlled and the ship is out of danger.

The American Rover was Europe-bound through heavy seas 160 miles off Newfoundland when the fire broke out. It headed for Argentia, Nfld.

The ship reported the fire has been controlled, but still smouldered, the coast guard said.

A coast guard plane, carrying fire equipment, hovered above the burning ship. The ship did not ask it for help.

The fully-automatic ship carried a crew of 39.

A steady rain fell and winds were up to 58 knots.

Ex-President Of CNR Dies

MONTREAL (CP) — Robert Charles Vaughan, who rose from a railway messenger boy to president of the CNR, died suddenly at his home here Wednesday. He was 82.

Mr. Vaughan was president of the railway from 1941 to 1950, when he retired after 51 years of railway service.

Immediately prior to the outbreak of war in 1939, he left his job as a CNR vice-president temporarily to organize and head the country's defence purchasing board until it became the nucleus of the ministry of supply.

He then returned to the railway and his 1941 appointment as president. The following year he was named chairman of the CNR's board.

TROUBLE SPOTS REMAIN

Safeguards Built-In Against Major Inflation

By JAMES NELSON

OTTAWA (CP)—Improved productivity through more and better education is the golden key to total prosperity for Canada in the years ahead, the Economic Council of Canada says in its second annual review.

The 28-members advisory council, in a 60,000-word review of the economy made public today, says there are built-in safeguards against runaway inflation and serious balance of payments difficulties if the authorities will deal effectively with specific trouble spots.

But it argues against fiscal and monetary policies — taxation, government expenditure, money supply and credit easiness—which would further stimulate demand. Needed now, the report says, are measures to stimulate supply rather than demand.

The big gains must be made in productivity and this can be enhanced by more education and worker re-training programs.

Reviewing the past year, the council says Canada surpassed the council's goal in employment and economic growth. Prices did rise higher than the goal set by the council's first annual review a year ago, but the second review says that except for pressures in the construction field, there are no signs of excessive inflation.

EAST NEEDS HELP

The review also says that for 40 years authorities have been trying to boost the less-developed parts of the country, without much success. The main area needing help is the Atlantic provinces and eastern Quebec.

The council, which makes its recommendations publicly to all authorities and not alone to the federal government or any one cabinet minister, says subsidies "merely to create temporary activity or to sustain indefinitely low-productivity industries and declining occupations" should be avoided.

It urges that "efficient agglomerations of activity—growth centres" be encouraged in the less-developed areas to take advantage of mass production, larger markets and more useful pools of skills.

On manpower and productivity, the council recommended the creation of a new manpower ministry—something the federal government plans to do with Jean Marchand as the minister-designate.

In an interview, council chairman John J. Deutsch said this was one of the recommendations in the council's first annual review which he developed in discussions with the government and some ministers.

The council recommended that university education be made available to every quali-

'Abolish Bank Loan Ceiling'

OTTAWA (UPI) — Governments—federal and provincial—were told today to hold the line in spending and not cut taxes to prevent the 1965 economic boom from becoming a bust in 1966.

The Economic Council of Canada also urged in its second report on the state of the economy that the 6 per cent ceiling on bank loans be abolished.

The report called on government to "minimize distortions and instabilities in credit and markets and to ensure easier access by homebuilders, consumers and small business to credit."

Principal recommendation toward this end was the removal of the "arbitrary" 6 per cent ceiling on bank loan interest rates "which currently forces many small borrowers into loans at much higher rates."

The ceiling was "unfavorable to the little fellow," said chairman John Deutsch. He said he didn't think removal of the bank rate ceiling would result in the increase of other interest rates.

He said suggested higher rates now demanded by consumer loan companies would likely come down.

Up-Island Still Suffers

Victoria got the all-clear today from weatherman, William Mackie.

The thermometer's on the way up and snow's on the way out.

Rain today started the clean-up job. And further rain is forecast for the next few days.

Overnight temperatures will be around 35, rising to 42 during the daytime.

While Victoria is on the road to recovery, the rest of Vancouver Island is wallowing in several feet of snow.

(See story Page 21.)

Intense cold that covered the northern province was to moderate also. Temperatures ranged to 27 below zero at Prince George Tuesday night.

RAIN FOLLOWS

In Vancouver, snow this morning was to be followed by rain later today.

Despite the fact that many Vancouverites were taking buses, traffic in some areas was chaotic. It got worse as a light snow started falling.

Cars parked on all transit routes in the city were towed away by police Tuesday night to give snow-clearing crews a chance.

FRASER VALLEY HIT

The cold snap came to a dramatic end in the Fraser Valley where near blizzard conditions closed schools and highways. Police asked motorists to stay at home. It was estimated that four to five inches fell at Chilliwack this morning.

The Trans-Canada Highway between Hope and Abbotsford is closed because of road and blizzard conditions.

At Sandspit on the southern end of the Queen Charlotte Islands the hotel had 60 guests in space normally used by 31. Loggers flying in to the Sandspit airport could not get from there to their isolated camps elsewhere on the islands.

BUILDERS OF B.C. FEATURE BEGINS TODAY

Capsule biographies of 100 Founders of British Columbia comprise a new series starting today on page 5 of The Times.

The feature will appear weekly during the centennial years 1966 and 1967.

In 1966 British Columbia celebrates the passing of 100 years since the union of the Crown Colonies of Vancouver Island and the British Columbia mainland. In 1967 the province joins in the national celebration of the centennary of Confederation.

The series has been prepared by the Canadian Confederation Centennial Committee of B.C. Its purpose is to better acquaint British Columbians with the lives and accomplishments of a representative group of the men and women who helped to build our province . . . explorers, fur traders, politicians, churchmen and early industrialists.

The committee points out that no project of this sort could mention all the pioneers who built B.C. This sampling is intended, however, to honor them all.

CRUCIAL TEST IN BYELECTION THIS MONTH

Labor Threatened by Viet Nam Policy Foe

LONDON (AP)—A professed radical opened a byelection campaign Tuesday to topple Britain's Labor government because of its support for U.S. policy in Viet Nam. The political mathematics of the government and the district make him a serious threat.

The byelection in the port city of Hull Jan. 27 is shaping up as the most crucial for Prime Minister Wilson's government since it took office in 1964. It was brought on by the death of the Labor member of Paliament for Hull North, Henry Solomons, last November.

Defeat for Labor would reduce its over-all House of Commons majority to one vote. Its prestige would be so badly damaged that Wilson might have to resign.

The challenge to Wilson is posed by Richard Gott, 27, a journalist running as the candidate of a group calling itself the Radical Alliance. Its organizers are leaders of Britain's ban-the-bomb movement, the Campaign for Nuclear Disarmament.

In most special elections, Gott normally could expect several hundred votes, a small amount of publicity and a platform to air his views.

He would represent little more than nuisance value to the other candidates: Labor representative Kevin McNamara, 31, a law lecturer at Hull Commercial College; Conservative Toby Jessel, 31, a London exporter, and Mrs. Laurie Millward, a housewife who is the Liberal candidate.

But because of Labor's narrow majority in both the Commons and the Hull North district, Gott is far more than just a nuisance for Labor. In the 1950s, Hull North elected Conservative MPs by margins of less than 1,000 votes. Solomons, the first Labor candidate elected in more than a decade, squeaked in by a margin of 1,181 votes out of a total of 47,717.

All the Conservatives need in Hull is a shift of less than two per cent of the voters away from Labor. They already have done better than that in several byelections during the last year. Gott's votes will come from labor, and they could make all the difference, even if they only number in the hundreds.

"Everyone is interested in the tragedy of Viet Nam," Gott told a reporter. "If I can make Mr. Wilson think again, I will have achieved my purpose."

Looks like they'll hev t' work out New York's transportation problem foot by foot.

U.S. 'FLYING CRANE' DOWNED BY VIET CONG

SAIGON (UPI) — The Viet Cong today shot down a mammoth U.S. army "flying crane" helicopter while it was ferrying ammunition to the Vietnamese central highlands, killing the five Americans aboard. U.S. troops in the same area captured and burned a Communist base camp.

A U.S. spokesman said the $6.25 million twin turbine aircraft called a "Skycrane" was burning before it crashed and that it apparently was the victim of ground fire. It was one of only six in existence. Ammunition aboard exploded for hours afterward, preventing any rescue efforts.

15-YEAR MANDATE

Grits Happy With Pearson

OTTAWA (CP)—Prime Minister Pearson has made it clear he has no plans for an early retirement from politics.

He delivered the message Tuesday both at a press conference and at a closed strategy meeting by Liberal MPs and senators.

Mr. Pearson will turn 69 April 23 and thus qualify for the $75-a-month old age pension.

The party caucus unanimously passed an unusual motion of confidence in his leadership Monday. Caucus chairman Bryce Mackasey said Tuesday Mr. Pearson had been given a 15-year mandate.

Mr. Pearson said he is willing to carry on as party leader as long as he is physically and mentally able. "And at the moment I feel physically and mentally fit."

He was approaching the new Parliament opening Jan. 18 with "great anticipation and eagerness to continue my work as leader of the party and as prime minister."

MAJORITY ELUDES HIM

Mr. Pearson has led his party in four general elections since he was elected leader eight years ago this month. Since then Liberal strength in the Commons has increased to 131 seats from an all-time low of 50 but a clear majority has eluded the former diplomat.

The Liberal MPs and senators met morning, afternoon and night Monday and Tuesday to review the Nov. 8 election and the government's legislative program for this year.

Word leaked out that many backbenchers urged the cabinet to "do something concrete to offset opposition demands for a $100 monthly old age pension. Mr. Pearson opposed this during the campaign, saying it would mean an irresponsible and massive increase in federal spending.

Many Liberals feel the Conservatives' promise of a $100 pension cost the government many votes and prevented the Liberals from gaining a majority in the 265-seat Commons.

The party's dismal showing in the Prairies—one seat out of 48—came in for discussion. Mr. Pearson said western senators made "very constructive suggestions. We hope by our actions, our attitudes and our interest in that area to increase our representation."

The next caucus is set for Tuesday, Jan. 18, immediately before Governor-General Vanier opens the 27th Parliament.

HOME GARDEN

Spring 'Appears' Nearer

By HILDA BEASTALL

Seed catalogs can always be counted on to arrive when we need them most.

They give the spirits a lift, bringing spring nearer with the need for planning and ordering.

Hilda

Some of the new things this year are really exciting especially among the annuals to be grown from seed for bedding patio boxes and outdoor planters.

A new petunia named Sunburst appears to be a lovely butter yellow grandiflora with which to make gorgeous summer color splashes.

Until now petunia colors have had only white to tone down the hot pinks, reds and rich purples. Now with this yellow, perhaps the sombrely mysterious blues and purples will become more appreciated.

A snapdragon with open-faced florets somewhat resembling the Butterfly-flower, schizanthus, is a winner being introduced this year.

The plants are 30 inches in height, branching from the base, and will continue in bloom until October if each stem is cut off as the flowers fade.

Bright Butterflies is the attractive name given this new snapdragon, for the color range includes red, bronze, pink, white, rose, yellow, scarlet and primrose.

A third new annual for this year appears among the cosmos, which is an ideal flower to hide fences or simply to furnish a background.

We have had the four to five-foot pink, red and white cosmos for years. These were followed by pink and red varieties of immense size, and then Orange Flare.

Now we are to see Sunset, a semi-double, two-inch diameter, burnt orange cosmos on bushy plants 30 inches in height.

I can imagine this being stunningly effective to give height to a flat bed of Blue Mantle petunias in full sun; or to fill small island beds set into a sunny patio.

Next week we'll take a peak at some new perennials.

Vote Muddle Cleared

INVERMERE (CP) — The matter of the ill-timed Invermere election appears to be settled. Successful commission candidate, Mrs. Ian Weir and Joseph Fuller, took their oaths of office and allegiance Monday night and it is not now expected that the village election will be further disputed.

2,700 Mothers Seek $45,000 For Disabled

Seeking $45,000 to help the disabled in the province, 2,700 mothers will march on Greater Victoria homes Jan. 31.

The mothers will knock on doors of homes and businesses between 4 and 7 p.m. Proceeds of the march will be used in a wide program of services.

Provincial honorary chief marching mother this year will again be Mrs. George Pearkes, wife of B.C.'s Lieutenant-Governor. Mrs. Pearkes has headed the marching mothers for four years.

Provincial goal is $275,000. The local group collected about $43,000 in 1964.

Among the services supported by the project:

- Victoria's Arbutus Crafts, 1119 Vancouver Street, where 45 handicapped manufacture baskets and furniture;
- A Vocational Services Centre in Vancouver with a clerical school and a supervised workshop, to which local handicapped are directed for training;
- Speech and hearing services in Vancouver and Victoria, which handle more than 2,500 persons annually;
- Medical rehabilitation and equipment including doctor bills, hospitalization and drugs, for 500 persons each year;
- Construction grants for provincial health centres and many related services.

Mothers wishing to volunteer their time for the end-of-month campaign should contact Rody Ryan at 388-5196.

Manhunt Ends In Australia

SYDNEY, N.S.W. (Reuters)—Escaped killer-convicts Ronald Ryan and Peter Walker were recaptured in Sydney tonight, 17 days after they broke jail in Melbourne, following one of the biggest manhunts in Australian history.

Ryan, 41, and Walker, 24, escaped from Melbourne's Pentridge jail, 500 miles from where they were recaptured, on Dec. 19 after clubbing a prison chaplain and shooting dead a guard.

Since their escape, they have been held responsible for robbing a bank of $10,000 and killing a man.

30,000 Protest Chemical Use

SINGAPORE (Reuters)—Thirty thousand people have demonstrated in the Can Tho province of South Viet Nam in protest against the use of "toxic chemicals" by United States forces, the North Viet Nam News agency reported today.

The report said people of the province marched repeatedly to two district capitals to demand compensation from the Americans for damage to their property.

The agency said chemical spraying in Chau Thanh and O Mon districts had affected thousands of people and destroyed more than 20,000 acres of crop fields and gardens.

Granduc closed the mine Tuesday in anticipation of the strike.
